STUDENT FLIER DIES IN PLUNGE OF 1,000 FEET

Pilot Is Seriously Injured in Landing Attempt at College Park.

MAN FLYING CRAFT HAD LICENSE WEEK

Capital Man Succumbs in Hospital From Skull Fracture.

AVIATOR LOSES LEG THROUGH ACCIDENT

Expected to Recover From Internal Hurts and Broken Nose.

One man was killed and another perhaps fatally injured in an airplane crash at the College Park (Md.) Airport yesterday.

The dead man is William Wilfred Kerr, 32 years old, of 1425 Rhode Island avenue northwest, a student pilot. He was a passenger in the plane, which was being flown by Edward L. Yeatman, 22 years old, of 250 South Walnut street, Lyon Park, Clarendon, Va.

According to employes at the airport, Yeatman, who received his pilot's license only last week, apparently was preparing to land after half an hour in the air when the plane, a Waco, which he had rented at the airport, went into a spin at a height of about 1,000 feet and crashed to the ground, where it was demolished.

Dies in Hospital.

There were few people at the airport at the time. Chief H. L. Leonard of the Prince Georges County Rescue Squad, who was called, rushed Kerr to Providence Hospital, where he died on the operating table. His skull was fractured, hospital authorities stated.

Yeatman was rushed to Garfield Memorial Hospital, where Dr. Howard P. Strine found it necessary to amputate his mangled leg above the ankle. He was treated also for a broken nose, possible fracture of the skull and possible internal injuries. Dr. Strine stated that Yeatman's condition was serious, but that he had a fair chance for recovery. He remained conscious until given an anesthetic in preparation for the operation.

Plane Owner Was Teacher.

Yeatman is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence B. Yeatman and is a mechanic of the Frigidaire Co.

The plane was owned by George Babcock, who was said to have instructed Yeatman in flying.

At the apartment house on Rhode Island avenue employes stated that Kerr had lived there only a short time and that nothing was known about him. A girl, who gave her name only as "Miss Gray," stated that he had become actively interested in aviation last fall, but declined to discuss him further.

Airman Falls 9,000 Feet Before Using Parachute

Cortland, N. Y., June 29 (A.P.).—Falling an estimated 9,000 feet before opening his parachute over the Cortland Airport, William Kenyon, of Brooklyn, here today set what is believed to be a new record for parachute drops.

Two planes went up. The one carrying Kenyon, piloted by W. E. Wendell, of New York City, went to 12,000 feet. The other circled around at 3,000 feet. Kenyon bailed out at 12,000 feet and when he was level with the other plane opened his chute. He wore two, on the theory that the fabric of one might give way under the strain, but found it unnecessary to use the second. He landed uninjured.

Policeman Recovers Watch

A watch, an ad and a reward proved satisfactory to two men.

It all happened the same day when James R. Henry, 1623 Lanier Place, had a "Lost" ad appear in the morning Post.

One of Washington's finest found the watch, read The Post and returned the timepiece to Mr. Henry "the first thing in the morning."

Non-Stop Return Hop To Bermuda Is Made

Round Trip, 1,600 Miles Covered in 17 Hours Two Minutes.

ROGER Q. WILLIAMS.

Valley Stream, N. Y., June 29 (A. P.).—The battered old monoplane Columbia, which Clarence Chamberlin flew from New York to Germany in 1927, after he and Bert Acosta had established a world duration record with her, tonight completed another pioneering flight.

Piloted by Roger Q. Williams, veteran of a transatlantic flight from Maine to Rome, the plane landed here at 9:03 (Eastern standard time), tonight after a nonstop, round-trip flight of 1,600 miles between New York and Bermuda.

With Williams were Harry E. Connor, a Navy-trained navigator, who achieved the difficult feat of guiding the plane to the coral-reef speck that is Bermuda, and Errol Boyd, former royal air force aviator. They made the 1,600-mile air jaunt in 17 hours and 2 minutes.

While eating big, juicy steaks at the field restaurant, the airmen described their flight. Hopping off from Roosevelt Field at 4:01 a. m. (Eastern standard time), they flew straight as an arrow to Bermuda and experienced no trouble finding it, although they were hampered by fog for considerable distances and by intermittent showers, which became a downpour at Bermuda.

Circling over Bermuda, they looked for a place to land, because the rain had caused one magneto to cut out.

"There wasn't a place to land," Williams said, "so we decided to come home, figuring that as soon as we reached dry weather the magneto would be all right. It was."

So they headed homeward, soaring over the Long Island air fields at 8:55 (E. S. T.). They reached Roosevelt Field but decided it was unsafe because of a haze to land there, and so came to Curtiss Field, landing at 9:03 p. m.

The thing that impressed Williams most was the large number of sharks they saw en route. "I never saw so many in all my life," he declared.

The only other flight from the American mainland to the British winter resort was a two-day forced-landing journey made recently by Lewis A. Yancey, William Alexander

SWIMMER DROWNS; SECOND IS MISSING

Harold Andrews Is Stricken at Herald Harbor by Heart Ailment.

MARINE SERGEANT LOST

With Harold Andrews, of Washington, a drowning victim yesterday while bathing in the Severn River at Herald Harbor, Md., police last night were searching for the body of a Marine noncommissioned officer who disappeared mysteriously while swimming in the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal at Widewater.

The Marine is Sergt. Charles R. Dray, 22 years old, an instructor in the industrial department at the corps school, Marine Barracks, Eighth and G street southeast, who was lost to sight yesterday afternoon about 1 mile from Great Falls on the Maryland shore.

While his disappearance was regarded by a large crowd of bathers there as an obvious case of drowning, the fact that he was regarded as a proficient swimmer and that no cry of alarm was heard by persons in bathing and on the well-traveled roadway gave rise to speculation that he may have vanished in another manner. His clothes were found on the bank, where he had left them.

Sergt. Dray went in swimming at Widewater early in the afternoon with Privates Al A. Rudolph and B. L. Pitzer, both of the Marine Barracks, who later were joined by five fellow Marines from the same post.

According to the story told to Sergt. Leroy Rodgers and Policeman James McAuliffe, of the Bethesda substation, Montgomery County police, who responded to a call early last night, the Marines were concluding an afternoon outing close by other bathers at the so-called beach on the north bank of the ca-

OCKER ELUDES HUNT BY TRIO OF CITIES

Man Who Threatened Coast Guard Force Drops From Sight.

WATCH MARYLAND HOME

Police of three cities still were searching unsuccessfully last night for Joseph C. Ocker, Coast Guard employe, who was believed to be on his way to Washington to "wipe out" the Coast Guard after shooting his sister and beating his estranged wife with a pistol in Detroit Friday night.

Members of the Coast Guard here are maintaining a close lookout for Ocker, and copies of the picture of him which appeared in The Post yesterday have been distributed to various Coast Guard men and officers to facilitate the search.

Ocker, who has been separated from his wife for three years, during which time he has attempted unsuccessfully on various occasions to effect a reconciliation, is understood to have conceived the idea that in some manner the Coast Guard is responsible for his marital woes.

That, at least, is the interpretation placed by members of the Coast Guard service upon the long-distance telephone message the man is said to have made Saturday in which he announced his intention to come here and "disintegrate" the entire organization in Washington.

The attack upon his sister and wife was made Friday night in the sister's home in Detroit, when he is declared to have flnown into a sudden violent rage during a conference in which he was seeking to smooth over his troubles with Mrs. Ocker.

All trains leaving Detroit are being watched closely, as are all trains arriving in Washington. In addition, careful vigilance is being maintained along the highways, as Ocker had an automobile and is believed to have

Sheriff's Blow Upon Jaw Of Mob Leader Ends Riot

Beaumont, Tex., Mob, Bent on Seizing Prisoner in Jail, Disperses After Chief Is Felled; Dangerous Situation Brought to Close.

Beaumont, Tex., June 29 (A.P.).—A hefty slap on the jaw, delivered by a robust and stout hearted sheriff broke up an embryo lynching party here early today.

The wallop was landed by Sheriff W. W. Covington on a sailor who had appointed himself leader of about 40 men, remnant of a mob of 200 which had milled about the Jefferson County Jail during the early hours of this morning. The blow sent the sailor and his "mobsmen" retreating in confusion, abandoning their attempt to remove from the jail a Negro accused of attacking a white woman. Tonight all was quiet and authorities did not anticipate additional trouble.

The Negro, Rainey Williams, was rushed to the jail here yesterday from Port Arthur, 22 miles south, where the alleged attack took place.

For hours Sheriff Covington had armed men on guard outside the jail and within had picked aids, each with rifle and pistol, to beat off any attempt at mob violence. Covington had tear bombs ready, machine guns were set up. Police worked steadily to keep the crowd from the jail and the fire department was prepared to put water hose into play.

After surging about, whispering, consulting and shouting "We want that Negro," the crowd began to melt away at 2 a. m., the hour which reports had said would bring an attack, and by 3:30 only about 40 men were left. These withdrew leaderless, to a dock. A sailor finally constituted himself the leader and was talking to his comrades about breaking in jail when Sheriff Covington, accompanied by a number of deputies, arrived at the dock.

The sheriff, a stout man, slapped the sailor and he and his followers fled helter skelter. They obtained their automobiles—those who had them—and quickly left the scene. Fifteen minutes later the jail yard and the immediate area about it was deserted except for officers and reporters.

The slap had cured a situation which a few hours before had been of the gravest nature.

BARRERE HUNT INVOLVES COOK AT ARMY POST

Woman Says Suspect in Baker Case and Chef Were Friendly.

KNOWN ONLY AS "MAC" TO POLICE INFORMANT

Accurate Description and Name of Employe at Fort Myer Fail.

SOLDIER FURLOUGHS REPORTED REVOKED

Shelby Refuses to Disclose Identity of Person Who Surrendered Gun.

Interest of authorities in their search for Herman H. Barrere, long-sought suspect in the Mary Baker murder case, last night was turned on his alleged friendship with a civilian cook who is said to work at Fort Myer.

A woman gave this information to the police. Whether the cook could explain production of the murder weapon was not learned last night.

Much of the information received by police concerning activities of the suspect came from the woman who last night said Barrere and the cook had been friendly for a long period. The woman could not give police an accurate description of the cook nor his name, but said he was known as "Mac."

Furloughs Revoked, Claim.

An unconfirmed report was received last night that soldiers stationed at Army posts in this city and Arlington County had been recalled from furloughs and would be reviewed by new witnesses on the case. The order canceling the furloughs was supposed to have been read late last week. Commanding officers at the Washington Barracks, Fort Myer and Headquarters Company quarters denied the report.

Inspector William S. Shelby last night would not reveal the name of the person from whom he obtained the gun believed to have been used in the killing. Inspector Shelby said that he was bound to secrecy regarding origin of the gun, the person who yielded it, and the manner in which it was obtained.

Headquarters and detectives and Department of Justice agents are checking a report that Barrere sold a tent, in which he had been living in Arlington County, to a storekeeper in the Georgetown Section one week after the murder was committed.

Widespread Hunt Launched.

Agents of the Department of Justice in distant cities are furthering the quest for Barrere, while local authorities began tracking reports that the World War veteran had been seen recently in the vicinity of Washington.

Through the identification of the pistol as that which fired the fatal bullets, authorities are armed with the first tangible clew in the mysterious case, which has baffled them since April 11.

A former employer of Barrere is said to have turned the weapon over to police after it had disappeared from his home and subsequently appeared in a desk in his office.

Gun Ownership Mystery.

Men who employed Barrere as a painter has been questioned, but none will say that he was the owner of the gun. Herbert Campbell, of Oak Crest, Va, who employed Barrere to paint his house, and later had him arrested on a larceny charge, said he owns an automatic which has never been out of his possession.

Barrere has been sought since early in May when he disappeared from his usual haunts. Since then he has been traced to Philadelphia and from there to New Orleans, where the scent was lost. All avail-

MINORITY SEES LONDON TREATY EFFECT UNFAIR

Barter of U. S. Interests Charged by Johnson, Robinson, Moses.

REPORT OPENS NEW WAR AGAINST PACT

Document Places Stress on Testimony of Navy Experts.

AMERICA HELD BOUND TO BIDDING OF BRITAIN

"Indecent Haste to Ratify" Veteran New Hampshire Lawmaker Says.

By ALBERT W. FOX.

Charging that the London Naval Treaty is unfair and unjust to the United States and asserting that cardinal national interests have been bargained away on the altar of internationalism, the minority report of the Senate foreign relations committee was yesterday made public.

It is signed by Senators Moses, Robinson, of Indiana, and Hiram Johnson. It presents a comprehensive analysis of outstanding features of the pact and stresses testimony taken before the committee when American naval experts were witnesses. It is beyond question the opening broadside in the battle the treaty opponents will wage against ratification.

Moses Deplores Haste.

Senator Moses adds a memorandum of his own after concurring in the conclusions reached by the minority report. In this memorandum dissent is expressed from what Senator Moses describes as "the indecent haste" with which the treaty is being pressed.

"It is now nearly a year since the initial steps were taken for the negotiation of this treaty," he says, "and the delegates to the London conference consumed fourteen weeks in formulatng the instrument.

"We are asked to pass upon it without sufficient time to study its provisions and under the handicap of oeing denied information which it is our constitutional right to possess."

This confidential information concerns the secret documents which ere referred to in the report. Thirty-one secret telegrams which passed between American, British and Japanese diplomatists and are cryptically referred to by numbers, have been requested by the foreign relations committee after the existence of these confidential dispatches was disclosed during the hearings.

Shown to Reed.

These dispatches relate specifically to the London Naval Treaty negotiations, the report shows. It further develops that Senator Reed has been permitted to see these dispatches and that he offered to convey the information they contained confidentially to members of the committee provided these members pledge themselves not to divulge any of the secrets or to refer to them during the discussion of the pact in the Senate.

The signers of the minority report refused to accept the secret documents unless the Senate could likewise be trusted with the information.

Mr. Johnson's Stand.

Senator Johnson, who wrote the report, states:

"The writer refused to accept any such offer and asserted the right of any senator to be as full and complete as that of the senator from Pennsylvania—to read and see and have all data relating to the treaty, to discuss that deemed appropriate and fitting with his fellows and, in conjunction with the terms of the treaty, to use with due circumspection and propriety, either in open session or, if deemed advisable, executive session of the Senate, all

REFUEL MARK BROKEN, BROTHERS PREPARE TO SOAR ON UNTIL JULY 4

Already holders of the endurance refueling record, John and Kenneth Hunter are keeping their plane, City of Chicago, in the air above Sky Harbor airport, Chicago, while Brothers Walter and Albert continue to operate the refueling plane. Sister Irene is the dietitian. Left to right: Walter, John, Irene, Albert and Kenneth.

Failure to Connect With Gasoline Plane May Ground Fliers.

WILD CROWD GREETS SHATTERED RECORD

Mother Near Collapse During Night Vigil at Chicago Airport.

SISTER REMAINS AT JOB PREPARING FOOD

Every Hour Aloft Adds to Fortune of Former Coal Miners.

Chicago (Monday), June 30 (A.P.). The flying Hunter brothers were still in the air at 12:40 Central daylight time this morning, with 440 hours of continuous flight behind them.

The endurance flight record of 420 hours and 21 minutes, set at St. Louis nearly a year ago, had been broken at 6:01 a. m. yesterday, and there remained only the question of how much longer the pilots and their sh'p, the City of Chicago, could continue to function.

Wilson Herren, flight manager, was still confident that the flight might be continued until July 4. Kenneth and John Hunter, copilots of the plane, were reported to be tired but still fit.

That the City of Chicago may be forced to land before daybreak because of shortage of fuel became a possibility this morning.

Two Attempts Fail.

A part of the gasoline was spilled during a refueling just at dusk yesterday. A short time later the endurance fliers swooped over the field, dropping a note telling of their need for more gasoline.

The refueling plane, manned by Albert and Walter Hunter, brothers of the record-breaking fliers, immediately took off in the dark in an attempt to make a contact. They were unable to find the endurance ship, and after playing a losing game of hide and seek returned to the landing field.

Again the endurance pilots swooped over the field, dropping a second appeal for fuel. The refuelers rigged up extra lights on their ship, in the hope that once in the air the endurance ship could find them. But the attempt was finally abandoned as too hazardous.

Refueling Pilots Haggard.

"The boys in the plane are too tired and sleepy," said Albert Hunter. "It would be too dangerous to try a night contact under these circumstances."

The refuelers said they had no idea how much gasoline had been spilled during the last refueling contact. They planned to take the air with gasoline at daybreak, if the endurance plane remained aloft.

The vigil of more than eighteen days had left Albert and Walter Hunter, who refuel the plane, haggard and sleep-starved. Their mother, Mrs. Ida Hunter, who arrived at Sky Harbor Airport Saturday night and remained awake to see the record broken, confessed she was "sleepy but happy," and their sister Irene, in charge of the commissary department, also was more than ready for sleep.

Break Means Disaster.

The plane, too, was beginning to show some signs of the strain. A note received from the pilots asked for a screw grease gun and a grease cup.

Mechanics explained that there was a quarter-inch tubing leading from the instrument board of the plane to each rocker arm on the motor, with a grease cup on the board. They supposed that this grease line was worn out and that the grease cup is needed for direct

TREASURY SURPLUS TO BE $200,000,000

Problem Looms in Payment of $4,500,000,000 for Next Fiscal Year.

REVENUE WILL DWINDLE

(Associated Press.)

Huge tax payments from income derived in 1929 will enable the Treasury today to complete the 1930 fiscal year with a surplus of approximately $200,000,000, but it will find itself faced with the problem of providing adequate funds to pay the $4,500,000,000 appropriated by Congress for next year in view of prospective dwindling revenue.

The Treasury's last statement, issued for the close of business last Thursday, showed the Government had collected $212,520,000 more than it spent since last July 1. With no large payments to be made before the end of the year tonight, it appeared certain that the surplus would be in the neighborhoood of the Treasury figure. The surplus for 1929 was $185,000,000.

The Wall street collapse last October, which, for a while had been expected to reduce income tax collections, was shown in the payments to have affected but comparatively few of the millions of taxpayers. Before the collapse the Treasury had estimated income tax for the 1930 fiscal year would amount to $2,480,000,000, but this figure was reduced by $80,000,000 through the 1 per cent reduction granted on normal and corporation incomes for 1929.

Despite this reduction the collections on Thursday had reached $2,404,000,000, or $78,000,000 more than was collected in the same period of the previous twelve months.

On that day the Government had collected a total of $4,151,057,206 since last July 1 and had spent $3,938,536,837. In addition to the income tax, customs receipts also spurted upward

DISTRICT MAY START NEW YEAR "BROKE"

Fiscal Period of 1931 Begins Tomorrow; Money Bill Still Deadlocked.

SIMMONS' ACT PUZZLES

The local government will start the fiscal year of 1931 without spending money unless Congress acts today on the District appropriation bill or on an emergency resolution.

The fiscal year begins tomorrow and ends June 30 next. To run the city for that period, the 1931 bill carries a total of $44,000,000. If this measure fails, and a resolution is adopted continuing a part of the current appropriation, the city will get about $33,000,000, and will have to delay for a year all new building projects and improvements.

When the gavels fell in the Senate and House on Saturday, the 1931 bill was in the same position it has been in for weeks—deadlocked, with both houses insisting that they will not yield on the question of a Federal contribution.

When the House passed the bill, it provided for a Federal contribution of $9,000,000. The Senate boosted this to $12,000,000. In the conference on the measure the Senate offered to set the figure at $10,000,000. The House, however, refused to compromise.

Meantime, there is much mystery as to why Representative Robert G. Simmons (Republican), of Nebraska, has delayed calling up the continuing resolution. He admits that he will do nothing more to save the big bill, and yet he has continued to postpone the calling up of the emergency resolution.

Persons at the Capitol opposed to Mr. Simmons say that he is afraid that if he does call for action on the resolution, a large number of members will turn against him. Reports were current at the Capitol over the week-end that President Hoover was irritated by the squabbling over the District bill, and would call upon the leaders to smash the deadlock.

Pair Slugs Elevator Man, Fails to Enter Law Office

Flees From Munsey Building After Beating Operator and Taking Master Keys; Sought to Force Way Into Wilton J. Lambert's Rooms.

A spectacular attempt by two men to gain entrance to the offices of Wilton J. Lambert, attorney, in the Munsey Building, across Pennsylvania avenue from police headquarters, last night was reported to police. Slugging the elevator operator, they are said to have held him up at the point of a gun and robbed him of a small amount of money and two master keys.

The men were carried to the seventh floor of the building, on which the lawyer's offices are located, by Hardy B. Harris, elevator operator, 26 years old, of 418 Warren street northwest. When he refused to deliver the keys, he declared, they attacked and robbed him. As Harris, dazed by the blow, staggered to the elevator, the men disappeared down the stairway. Police were called, but a thorough search of the building failed to discover the supposed thieves.

This was the second attempt made to gain entrance to the office. About two hours earlier the men came to the building and asked Harris for the keys, saying they were employes of the attorney, and had left their own keys at home. When he told them he did not have the keys, they left.

Officials of the building had not asked for special police protection for the building last night, but Lieut. J. F. Beckett, of the First Precinct, said last night that he was taking all precautions against another raid on the office building. Every office in the building would be open to the men if they appeared again, having in their possession the master keys.

The robbers were both young men, one of them well-dressed, and one very shabby in appearance. Police last night had tentatively identified them, from the description given by Harris, as a couple of "small-time racketeers" who loiter around the corner of Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Detective John W. Wise, of headquarters, has been assigned to the case. Harris' injuries were not serious and he refused medical treatment. After being questioned by the detective, he went home.

attachment to the motor and the grease gun to permit direct lubrication.

Flight Manager Herren said he and his aids are watching the plane closely for such signs. There is a possibility that such important parts as control rods and wires will begin to wear, he said, and a break would mean disaster, as would a too-weary hand at the controls.

Rewards Pile Up.

"I'll stop the flight rather than run any risks, now that we hold the endurance record," Herren declared.

Meanwhile, each added hour of flight is piling up rewards for the brothers Hunter. Their flying today netted then nearly $2,500. An oil company has pledged them $100 an hour. Several other concerns have promised them a dollar or more for every hour they remain aloft after breaking the record.

In addition, the pilots have been promised a new Wright J-6-300 motor by the company manufacturing them, and Herren yesterday revealed that they will receive a 25 per cent share in the takings of the two Ford planes which are taking hundreds of spectators at the field for rides at $5 per passenger.

Yesterday the crowd which stayed up all night with no interest save curiosity, seemed reluctant to go home. Through the anxious hours of darkness, with success still in the balance, they had milled about the field, scanning the skies for an occasional glimpse of the tiny tail light. They had danced, eaten many sandwiches, drunk much coffee—anything to kill time and stay awake.

Reactions of Crowd.

And then the black sky began to melt into a heavy gray and the first pale light of morning sifted through the clouds. It was almost 5 o'clock. There was no dancing now. No sandwich eating. Nervous suspense seemed everywhere. Necks bent backward. Little groups laughed hollowly—not that there was anything especially amusing to them. Now there was less than a minute. The radio announcer—and then bedlam. Automobile horns. Sirens. Shouting. Clapping of hands. Beating of pans. Roaring of motors. Noise.

It dies away. But the crowd is alive with a new kind of excitement now. The record has been tied. Only another hour—they must make it—they must. A few more sandwiches are shoved down, some more coffee gulped, but hurriedly. The plane is still droning away—and the minutes are passing—and passing. The crowd is pressing close to the hangar where the radio announcer keeps check on his watch. He raises his hand for silence. It isn't necessary. He stands ready—he speaks!

Brothers Remain Aloft.

The fliers can't help but hear that noise. They are speeding up. Now they are stunting and the crowd is thrilled, perhaps a little worried. They wish the boys would be careful. They are back in their monotonous pace again now, droning around—droning around.

Sleepy faces turn toward home. New ones take their place. Cars pull up in droves bringing fresh greeters of the new champions. The refueling ship goes up again—more fuel. Now the job is done. Back to the sandwiches. Back to the droning—droning.

And the brothers keep going, counting new fortune for every hour they stay up. The extent of their earnings is still uncertain. Before the flight the brothers had estimated they might make a total of about $200,000. Certain it is that their prize money will be large—that they'll not have to go back to coal mining for their next ship.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Squadron Leader Charles Kingsford-Smith, commander of the transatlantic plane Southern Cross, today sent a telegram of congratulation to Kenneth and John Hunter, who set a new refueling flight record.

"Your great achievement goes far to prove the complete dependability of a good airplane in the hands of good men," the message said. "My comrades of the Southern Cross * * * join me in the wish that you may go even farther—right to the Fourth of July. Cheerio."

MOTHER OF FLIERS WEARY, BUT PROUD

SISTER IRENE COOKS ON

Chicago, June 29 (AP.).—A weary, gray-haired woman, whose countenance alternately beamed pride and betrayed worry, was the cynosure of all eyes at the Sky Harbor Airport, scene of the world record airplane endurance refueling flight.

She is Mother Hunter, the mother of the two youthful pilots, Kenneth and John, of the City of Chicago, who today surpassed the world record of 420 hours of continuous flying; Albert and Walter, who have handled the refueling plane, the Big Ben, and Irene, the kid sister, who has cooked the meals for her brothers.

Mother Hunter was quite upset at finding herself a celebrity.

"They are constantly taking my picture," she said. "They won't give me time to get prettied up. I didn't sleep much last night. About a half-hour. I wanted to be sure and be on the field at dawn when they passed the record set by the St. Louis boys, so I didn't stop to dress up much. I didn't dream I would run into all this picture taking."

Radiophones Two Sons.

As the City of Chicago roared nearer and nearer to the record set by Dale Jackson and Forrest O'Brine in the St. Louis Robin, the tired mother almost collapsed, but today she was here and there, receiving the congratulations of the crowd.

Later an announcer told her he wanted her to speak over the radio and send greetings to her boys, who have a receiving set in their plane. She slipped away for a while, but when her ime on the program came she was in front of the microphone in a new brown straw hat and a black silk dress.

"Hello, Kenneth; hello, John. It's your mother speaking. I—I am so proud of you." Her voice quivered and her hands reached out as if to catch the slim rod of the microphone for support, but only for a moment and then her words of encouragement to go on rang out clear, firm and almost joyous.

Then amid the applause she slipped back into the crowd.

Aloft Only Once.

She hadn't wanted to see her boys grow up to be aviators—not at first.

"I was afraid," she explained. "But not now. I look on it just like riding in an automobile, don't you?" she appealed. Her nervous fingers fumbled at her beads.

"However, I guess I'm not much advertisement for my boys. I have only been up once.

"My baby boy, Kenneth, had a birthday in the air. He was 22 years old on June 18. He got to celebrate it like he wanted to—flying his way to set a new record."

It will be a little easier for "Mother" Hunter from now on, because Mrs. Albert Hunter, her daughter-in-law; Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Hunter and their son, William, of Staunton, Ill., arrived today. Dr. Hunter is the aviator's nephew. Their father is dead.

Sister Endures in Kitchen.

And there is another heroine on the field, the blonde, curly-headed Irene, who has devised and cooked the meals that have made her brothers endurance fliers.

While the pilots circle the airport, determined to remain aloft for 500 hours, Irene is planning menus to sustain them until July 4—their avowed goal.

Despite 18 days of cooking in the kitchen of a restaurant crowded with extra help needed to serve the huge numbers of people constantly at the field, day and night, Miss Hunter prepared a special chicken dinner topped off with strawberry shortcake and whipped cream.

St. Louis Robin Team May Ascend July 13

St. Louis, June 29 (A.P.).—The St. Louis Robin team, Dale Jackson and Forest O'Brine, whose refueling endurance record was beaten today by the Hunter brotheras at Chicago, plan to take the air again to bring the record back to St. Louis.

Immediately after telegraphing their congratulations to the new champions, John and Kenneth Hunter, this morning Jackson and O'Brine announced they plan to go aloft July 13, the anniversary of the start of their St. Louis Robin flight, for another gruelling test.

The flight is to be a civic affair and is contingent upon raising $30,000 to $35,000 by public subscription to finance it. Jackson and O'Brine own two planes and they expect to equip them for the flight, naming the endurance ship the Greater St. Louis.

O'Brine operates a flying service here and Jackson has been stunt flying.

"We know what they have gone through and they deserve a lot of credit," the Robin fliers said in commenting on the achievement by the Hunter brothers.

WILLIAMS RETURNS FROM BERMUDA HOP

and Zeb Bouck. The round trip today covered virtually the same amount of water as the course taken by the American airmen who went to Europe via Newfoundland and Ireland.

Before he hopped off from Roosevelt Field, Williams said he was making the flight for the purpose of testing the commercial possibilities of a Bermuda air line and for "testing the varying air currents over the Gulf Stream in a single day." He added that a group of financiers was considering establishing a regular Bermuda service using 20-passenger planes.

Asked whether an air service would be feasible, Connor said: "If somebody will give us the money we will start one tomorrow."

Rain Hampers Sight.

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 29 (A. P.).—Swooping down from rain clouds, Roger Q. Williams and his two comrades in the monoplane Columbia completed the first leg of their nonstop round-trip flight from New York to Bermuda at 3:40 p. m. (1:40 p. m., Eastern standard time). After dropping a bag of mail and twice circling over the city, they headed back for the United States.

Despite a tropical downpour that had begun at 11 a. m., a great crowd turned out to watch the American aviators. Visibility was poor.

Williams, celebrated transatlantic flier, wasted no time in maneuvers over Hamilton. The Columbia made two small circles overhead in the pouring rain and speedily swooped off toward New York. The bag of mail landed in the back yard of a private house.

George legislators will go to school when the State university conducts its institute of public affairs July 7 to 16.

First of North Americans Canonized by Pope Pius

Ceremony Is Attended by The Rev. Edmund Walsh, of Georgetown.

THE REV. EDMUND A. WALSH.

Vatican City, June 29 (A.P.).—The first saints ever named from the North American Continent were canonized today, with Pope Pius XI presiding over the solemnities.

Blessed Jean de Brebeuf and his seven companions, who suffered martyrdom at the hands of Indians in Canada and northern New York in the first half of the seventeenth century, were those honored. Among them was Father Isaac Jogues, the first Catholic priest ever to set foot on Manhattan Island, in the present City of New York.

The maryrs will be commemorated by the church every September 26, Pope Pius announced in proclaiming them saints.

Pope Pius sang the mass in the presence of many North Americans, including a group of the most prominent Jesuists in the United States, who had special places of honor because the martyrs belonged to that order. Many Canadians were present, including W. T. Kernahan, representing the Knights of Columbus of Canada and Newfoundland, and Mrs. Kernahan, representing the Catholic Women's League. With them were their two daughters, Katharine and Mary.

Among the Jesuit priests at the ceremony were the Revs. Edmund A. Walsh, president of the Catholic Near East Relief Association and vice president of Georgetown University; Edward Coffey, representing Georgetown University at Washington, D. C.; John Wynne, historian of the North American martyrs and compiler of the Catholic Encyclopedia; Thomas White, of the Jesuit house at Shadowbrook, Mass., and Francis Xavier Talbot, literary editor of America.

Bishop Thomas J. Walsh, of Newark, N. J., and Mgr. Edward Mooney, American, who is apostolic delegate to India, also represented the United States in the ceremonies.

Auxiliary Bishop Joseph C. Plagens, of Detroit, also was in the procession as a representative of the American episcopacy.

The Canadians included 350 pilgrims, who had an audience with Pope Pius yesterday, and 150 Canadian priests, studying in the seminaries here, or engaged by other duties in Rome or Vatican City.

Canadian clergymen were headed by Cardinal Raymond-Marie Rouleau. With him in the procession were the Canadian Archbishops Guillaume Forbes, of Ottawa; Michael J. O'Brien, of Kingston, Ontario, and Bishops Charles La Marche, of Quebec; George Courchesne, of Rimouski.

The Pope appeared benignant and kindly, but lacked the vigor and firmness of stride which characterized his appearance at Sunday. His voice was carried by means of amplifiers to every corner of the huge edifice.

Besides the two named, those canonized were: Father Antoine Daniel, Father Noel Chabanel, father Gabriel Lalemant, Brother Rene Goupil, Brother Jean de la Lande and Father Charles Garnier. They were beatified June 21, 1925.

CHAMBER REVEALS EXPORT TRADE DROP

National Commerce Body, in 1930 Review, Discloses First-Quarter Loss.

FALLS OFF ONE-FIFTH

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in a survey of foreign trade for the first quarter of 1930, found that exports of important commodities had declined a fifth as compared with last year. But they were only about 4 per cent below the average of similar periods of the years 1924-1928.

The chamber explains that this is a reflection of world-wide business recession and fall of commodity prices, with consequent lowered purchasing power of our foreign markets.

"As compared with the exceptionally buoyant first quarter last year, exports total for the first three months of this year show a decline of about 20 per cent," it was explained.

Preponderance of Declines.

"For the first time since 1922 the export figures show a preponderance of declines. The values of only 14 of our 50 chief exports (28 per cent of the total value of exports) were larger in the first quarter of 1930 than in the corresponding periods of 1929. Five of these 14 were machinery items. In quantity, only 26 out of 95 articles recorded increases.

"One of the severest declines among our exports was suffered by automobiles, parts and accessories, the value of which was $97,000,000, or 46 per cent, lower than a year ago. During the January-March period of 1930 we exported 28,587 motor trucks and buses, or less than half the number shipped abroad in the first quarter of 1929. However, the number thus exported was 60 per cent above the average of the 1924-1928 first quarters. Exports of passenger cars totaled only 56,134, or 49 per cent less than a year ago and 11 per cent below the five-year average shipments. Foreign shipments of automobile engines totaled 30,861, a decline of 18 per cent.

"Exports of gasoline, naphtha, &c., continued very large.

"Sales abroad of agricultural machinery and implements continued to show a large total increase during the first quarter of 1930, owing mainly to purchase of tractors and combines by Soviet Russia, two-thirds of our total exports of these machines going to that market. Purchases to most of the other markets were off.

Other Statistics Revealed.

"Power-driven metal-working machinery exports increased 11 per cent over shipments made a year ago and 140 per cent above the 1924-1928 average. Construction and conveying machinery increased 23 per cent over exports for the first quarter of 1929 and 72 per cent above the five-year average.

"Exports of metals as a whole declined 30 per cent.

Governors in Utah For Annual Parley

Hoover Address to Diners From Capital on Air Tonight.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 29 (A. P.).—Preparatory to the opening here tomorrow of the national governors' conference, State executives of fourteen States arrived here today and became recipients of Western hospitality.

They included governors from as far east as New York and Maine, and from Georgia and Virginia in the South. After a day of resting and sightseeing in this city and vicinity they motored this afternoon to Ogden for a drive up Ogden Canyon and a dinner afterward as guests of that city.

Arrangements for a national broadcast of the governors' banquet over the Columbia network from 8:30 to 9:30 p. m., Mountain standard time tomorrow, include an address to the governors by President Hoover from Washington and greetings from the various executives present to the people of their States.

Govs. Roosevelt, Theodore Christianson, of Minnesota, and C. C. Young, of California, are to address the banquet.

LAW INQUIRY CURB ROUSES H. W. TAFT

BAR HEAD ALSO CRITIC

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—The Senate's action in confining use of the appropriation for President Hoover's law enforcement commission to investigation of prohibition enforcement was criticized today by Henry W. Taft, brother of the late Chief Justice, and Charles C. Burlingham, president of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

Both declared that such limitation would be unfortunate, because court procedure and law administration needed improvement which the commission could suggest. Mr. Taft said these problems are of greater importance than prohibition enforcement.

Much Material Gathered.

"It was the original idea of President Hoover," Mr. Taft said, "that the entire system of administering law in the courts, and especially the Federal courts, should be subjected to a scientific investigation, and that recommendations should be made by the commission to facilitate the processes for the enforcement of law in those courts and to remove congestion upon the calendars, which, in the thickly settled communities, has amounted to a denial of justice.

"The commission has, I am informed, made extensive investigation, through most competent experts, and has gathered together much material. It would be a grave sacrifice of the public interest if that material is not used as the basis for legislation proposed by the commission.

"The enforcement of the prohibition law is, of course, a matter of great importance, but from the standpoint of the general administration of justice in the Federal courts, the other matters which are being dealt with by the commission are of much greater importance."

Burlingham cited the late Chief Justice Taft as authority for the statement that "administration of the criminal law in the United States was a disgrace to our civilization."

Criticisms Not Heeded.

"To cripple the commission at this stage of its work by denying funds with which to proceed is unjustifiable and inexcusable," he added. "For at least fifteen years Congress has turned deaf ear to the appeals of the American Bar Association for a few simple amendments to our law.

"The criticisms and suggestions of the late Chief Justice for improvements in the criminal law were unheeded. Now, when the work of the national commission is half done, funds to complete it are denied, not on grounds of public policy, but apparently merely for political and partisan reasons."

Civil War's 'Incubator' To Celebrate Centennial

Marshall, Mich., June 29 (A.P.).—This little Michigan city, scene of an antislavery event that is credited with having kindled the Civil War, is 100 years old. A civic celebration is set for July 3, 4 and 5.

In 1847 Adam Crosswhite, a Kentucky slave, settled in Marshall. When his master arrived to claim him, the citizens helped Crosswhite to escape into Canada. The report of the incident aroused Henry Clay, who proposed the fugitive slave law of 1850, which crystallized abolition sentiment. The panorama of Marshall's 100 years will be told in a parade of floats.

Kemal Asked to Give Land to U. S. Negroes

Istanbul, Turkey, June 29 (A.P.).—The Detroit Negro, Mehmet Ali, a stranded Moslem Moses, who came here to seek a "promised land" for American Negroes, today presented to Mustapha Kemal Pasha his petition for permission to found a colony in Turkey.

"In the name of 28,000 Moslem Negroes suffering from racial prejudice in America, I petition you to accord land on the shores of the Bosphorus, where we may create a flourishing American town and enjoy Turkey's traditional impartiality to Negroes," he said. The ghazi referred the petition to the Angora authorities.

HOUSE VOTE LOOMS ON CRIME BODY FUND

Cramton Hopes for Success of Amendment Granting $338,000 to Group.

ACTION SEEN TOMORROW

(Associated Press.)

Opportunity to vote on whether it desires to appropriate $250,000 and the unexpended balance of $88,000 for continuation of investigations by President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission probably will be given the House tomorrow under a plan of administration forces.

The controversy over the item that has caused President Hoover to threaten to procure funds from private sources for the inquiry in event Congress does not provide them, is before the House and Senate conferees on the second deficiency bill.

Under the law and its rules, the House conference committee can not accept the Senate amendment to the last of the big supply bills of this session, providing $50,000 for the commission to use exclusively for inquiry into prohibition enforcement.

Cramton Is Hopeful.

The House conferees will report disagreement to this amendment and Chairman Wood, of the House appropriations, will submit to the House the proposition of appropriating the funds recommended for the commission by the Budget Bureau and President Hoover.

Representative Cramton (Republican), Michigan, a dry leader and an important member of the appropriations committee, is confident that the House will act favorably on the item. The item originally was stricken from the bill in the House on a point or order made by Representative Laguardia (Republican), New York, on the ground that there was no existing law authorizing the commission for a second year.

Last year the commission was authorized by the Senate and $250,000 was appropriated for the commission. Of this $88,000 is unexpended, and would have been reappropriated. The Senate amended the deficiency bill, carrying about $80,000,000 for contingencies in Government operation, in which it allowed the commission only $50,000 with a reappropriation of the unexpended balance for prohibition inquiry.

Appearance of Wickersham.

Appearing before the House appropriations committee in support of the item, George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission, said the group had about half completed its work of studying all law enforcement, and had discovered a woeful need for revision of many of the criminal laws as well as a lack of statistical information regarding law enforcement.

Asserting the Senate had initiated the commission, Cramton said yesterday, it should be willing for it to complete its work in order to obtain the full benefit of the investigations.

Private Funds Possibility.

"The matter is not a wet or dry issue," Cramton said. "Prohibition is only one phase of law enforcement to be considered. The commission is studying important fundamentals dealing with the crime conditions, and it is a big work and is needed.

"If Congress should fail to give the necessary funds and permission to conduct the study on a broad scope, I believe President Hoover would be justified in obtaining private funds for this important work."

LaGuardia attacked in the House Saturday as illegal Mr. Hoover's plan to obtain funds from private sources for the commission. However, he said if the funds were voted on separately and favorably by Congress, there would be no doubt they would be made available to the commission.

Colored Longshoreman Will Run for Governor

Baltimore, Md., June 29 (A.P.).—The Maryland Communist party in convention today nominated for governor Samuel Parker, of Baltimore, a 26-year-old Negro longshoreman. The convention was attended by 34 delegates from Baltimore, Cumberland and Hagerstown. Three other Baltimoreereans completed the ticket.

Parker is represented on the petition, seeking to have his name placed on the batllot for the fall election, as a waiter, but friends today said he was a longshoreman, at present numbered atmong the unemployed.

Coast Guard Fire Stops Liquor Boat

Chickey Seized With 500 Sacks of Rum Aboard in Connecticut.

New London, Conn., June 29 (A.P.). The speed boat "Chickey" with 500 sacks of liquor aboard was seized early today near Little Gull Island after she had been stopped by machine gun fire from two Coast Guard patrol boats.

The "Chickey" had a crew of three, none of whom was injured by the machine gun bullets. Last week she was seized for violation of the navigation laws and fined $600 in New York City.

The boat was captured after she had eluded a Coast Guard patrol boat near Montauk Point where it was sighted. One pounders were fired across the bow of the Chickey, both near Montauk Point and Little Gull Island, Coast Guard officials said, before machine gun fire was resorted to. The rum boat and her crew were brought to the local harbor and later left for New York.

One Dead, One Shot In Rum Gun Duel

Slayer, Wounded, Kills Kentuckian From Prone Position.

Pikesville, Ky., June 29 (A.P.).—Landon Leedy was shot and killed today by E. C. Chapman in a pistol duel 17 miles from Pikesville. Chapman was brought to the hospital here in a critical condition. He said Leedy fired six shots at him, felling him with one of them, and that he shot Leedy while lying down, fatally wounding him.

The shooting occurred at Chapman's home on the Meat House Fork of Johns Creek in Pike County. It was said that Chapman had reported Leedy for making whisky, that Leedy had been arrested and threatened Chapman.

Chapman was wounded in the liver. During the fight Lewis Gannon, a bystander, was struck by a bullet that inflicted a flesh wound in the hip.

CONGRESS PREPARES TO END ITS SESSION

Senate to Take Up New Bill for Veterans' Relief at Sitting Today.

MAY FINISH WEDNESDAY

(Associated Press.)

Determined to bring the long session of Congress to an end by Wednesday, leaders in the Senate and House yesterday gathered their forces for the final drive on several unfinished pieces of legislation.

The Senate will take up the substitute veterans' relief measure for that vetoed by President Hoover today. Few changes have been made in this modified bill as it was passed by the House, and early enactment of it is declared certain.

The second deficiency appropriation bill, including the funds for the Hoover Law Enforcement Commission, is the other measure standing in the way of adjournment. House leaders are preparing to seek to increase the $50,000 voted by the Senate for the commission and to wipe out the Senate's restriction that the inquiry must be confined hereafter to prohibition alone.

Hoover Is Determined.

Some difficult parliamentary maneuvers will be necessary to bring about any revision of the Senate's restriction on the commission, and the apparent decision of the House leaders to undertake the move augurs some fireworks in the closing hours. Regardless of the decision of Congress, President Hoover is determined to finish the general investigation of law enforcement undertaken by the commission a year ago—with private funds if necessary.

The nearness of the adjournment date to the Fourth of July is complicating President Hoover's program to call the Senate back at once for a special session to consider the London naval treaty. Some advocates of the treaty would have Mr. Hoover call the Senate back on the Fourth of July if the congressional adjournment is taken just the day before.

There was still more hope last night that the House would be able to take action on two of the unemployment measures of Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, which were passed some time ago by the Senate.

Muscle Shoals Action Drags.

However, there was little prospect for final action at this session on either the long-standing controversy over disposition of the gigantic Muscle Shoals, Ala., power and nitrate plant, or on the House bill to regulate motor bus transportation.

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, will make a final effort on the motor bus bill, which is the pending business in the Senate, but he will give way first to the veterans' bill, which Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, is ready to call up in the Senate today.

A contest is in sight in the Senate over the veterans' relief bill. The administration is backing the measure as it was passed by the House, providing disability pensions to World War veterans with a maximum allowance of $40 a month. The Senate finance committee approved this bill.

Increase Asked for.

Senators Walsh, of Massachusetts, and Connally, of Texas, Democrats, have pending an amendment to increase the pension figures, allowing a maximum of $60 a month. The debate will give the Senate its first opportunity to discuss the presidential veto of the first veterans measure.

Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, issued a statement yesterday calling the new measure "the Mellon bill" and asserting that the World War veterans "will never get a square deal as long as Andrew Mellon is Secretary of the Treasury." He said the "profits of war profiteers should be utilized to compensate adequately World War veterans."

The House will try to finish work today on the copyright bill of Representative Vestal (Republican), Indiana. It will then tackle the border patrol unification measure of Representative Hudson (Republican), Michigan, which the administration has requested.

Hard Coal Miners Talk Scale Today

Formal Negotiations With Operators to Start in New York.

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Formal negotiations for a new wage contract between anthracite mine workers and operators will begin here tomorrow. The present wage agreement, entered into February 12, 1926, after the memorable strike that lasted throughout the winter of 1925-26, expires August 31.

Each side is hopeful of avoiding another suspension of mining when the present agreement expires, and for that reason informal conferences are understood to have been held leading up to the fixing of tomorrow as the beginning of the parley.

There is general agreement among miners and operators that a suspension should be avoided. This agreement is heartily indorsed by the business and railroad interests in the anthracite regions, which have suffered severely because of the long strikes.

Kurdish Tribe Hemmed In by Turkish Soldiers

Istanbul, Turkey, June 29 (A.P.).—Delayed dispatches from Van and Bayezit state that a band of 100 Kurdish horsemen from Persia still are entrenched on Mount Ararat, hemmed in by Turkish troops.

The band crossed the frontier from Persia to Turkey on June 20, joining the Kurdish Haydaranli Tribe, to which they are related, and plotted an uprising against the Turkish government. Turkish soldiers and bombing airplanes have driven back into Persia other bands that made incursions into the region of Agri and Hanik. The government hopes to exterminate entirely the band entrenched on Mount Ararat.

Cardinals to Meet With Pope Today

Former Capital Resident and Four Others to Get Red Hats.

Vatican City, June 29 (A.P.).—Cardinals, Archbishops and other prelates have gathered here from all over the world for the secret consistory of tomorrow morning, when Pope Pius XI will create five new cardinals.

Many prelates have come from South America to honor Archbishop Da Silveira Cintra, of Rio de Janeiro, when he is made cardinal. Similarly, many prelates have come from France, accompanying Bishop Lienart, of Lille, France's new cardinal.

Three Italians will ascend to the cardinalate dignity—Mgr. Marchetti-Selvaggiani, secretary of the Congregation of the Propagation of the Faith, who at one time was auditor of the papal delegation at Washington; Mgr. Raffaelo Rossi, assessor of the Consistorial Congregation, and Mgr. Serafini, secretary of the Congregation of the Council.

Churchmen Avoid Fight on Gridiron

Low Church Members Seek to Prevent Service of Anglo-Catholics.

London, June 29 (A.P.).—Thousands of members of the high and low church parties of the Church of England nearly came to blows upon the Chelsea Football Ground today. The field was chosen by the Anglo Catholic Congress for an open air celebration of high mass to inaugurate its sessions.

Twenty-five thousand high churchmen arrived at the field this morning and found a large number of low churchmen bearing banners inscribed with the words: "No Popery," and distributing texts and handbills and shouting exhortations through megaphones.

The Anglo Catholics, who came from all parts of the country, finally made their way into the arena, and the service began. With its first notes the tumult of the low church zealots died down. Trouble at the ceremony had been anticipated, as the low church party had appealed to the Bishop of London and to the prime minister to prevent the service.

A thorn reputed to be from the "crown of thorns" worn by Christ is in a collection of religious relics.

FILM PARLEY HELD WORLD AMITY KEY

Hays' Negotiations Expected to Lead to Other Big Business Accords.

TARIFF WORRY IS FELT

Paris, June 29 (A.P.).—Big business of Europe is eagerly watching developments in the negotiations between American and German motion picture interests. Many observers believe that success of the negotiations in which Will H. Hays is playing a notable part, will point the way to settlement of serious economic world problems, and prove the value and necessity of international trade understandings based upon good will and equity.

It was learned tonight that the German-American negotiations, which concern patent rights involving millions of dollars, have made appreciable progress, though there are some difficulties still to overcome.

International circles in Paris continue to show nervousness over what they expect to be the unfavorable international economic effect of the new American tariff. The end of the week brought emphasis on earlier opinion that satisfactory economic agreements between nations and between big business interests in different nations and on different continents are imperative if the existing economic uneasiness is to be dispelled. Notably was the opinion expressed that world prosperity, amity and peace can best be promoted by such commercial accords. Observers here predicted that the expected success of the German-American film pourparlers will encourage similar negotiations in other domains.

Chinese Reds Menacing City Are Driven Back

Amoy, China, June 29 (A.P.).—After a month of guerilla warfare in the vicinity of Lungyenchow, 75 miles west of Amoy, between Communists and the Gentry army, composed of armed farmers, villagers and allied bandits, the Communists today were driven from the area, at least temporarily.

The victory ended a crisis in which the Communists had besieged Lungyenchow, threatening to sack the city. Communistic disorders of southern Fukien province appeared to be waning as the result of widespread popular opposition.

Insurgents Rule in Bolivia; President and Family Hide

Gen. Hans Kundt, Commander of Beaten Army, Also Takes Refuge in Legation; La Paz Showers Flowers on Victors.

La Paz, June 29 (A.P.).—After a week of fighting all over Bolivia, the insurgent movement led by Gen. Blanco Galindo today ruled in La Paz and throughout the country. A distinct easing of the situation was evident in La Paz this morning.

So much had conditions improved since the insurgents captured the capital on Friday, that the de facto government already is considering lifting the state of siege decreed by the council of state appointed by former President Hernando Siles. La Paz and other cities are celebrating their freedom by showering flowers upon the insurgent soldiers.

This city gave itself over to excited examination of the incidents that since last Sunday have led to the overthrow of the Siles regime, the flight of the former president and his council of state and the advent to power of a military council headed by Gen. Galindo.

The revolution had its inception in the suppression of a demonstration by students last Sunday against former President Siles, who was accused of attempting to make himself virtual dictator of Bolivia by amending the constitution so as to permit his reelection for a long time.

Many students were killed by the police, a series of sporadic outbreaks then occurred all over the country, and Gen. Galindo firmly established his power at the important industrial and railway city of Oruro.

Gen. Galindo sent an ultimatum to the council of state, and when it was virtually ignored led his troops in a successful attack on La Paz. The triumph of the insurgents was speedy. They were welcomed enthusiastically.

Former President Siles took refuge with his family in the Brazilian Legation, and Gen. Hans Kundt, German commander of the Bolivian army, in the German Legation. The fighting resulted in many casualties.

TENURE OF TEACHER JOBS TO BE STUDIED

National Education Group Also to Have Reports on Pensions.

SESSIONS IN COLUMBUS

Columbus, Ohio, June 29 (A.P.).—The National Education Association will give attention at its annual meeting here this week to legislation on two issues of vital importance to school teachers—tenure laws to make jobs of competent teachers secure and retirement systems to provide for those who have devoted their lives to the school.

The report of the association's committee on tenure laws calls attention to an act passed by the General Assembly of Pennsylvania last year, which is a departure from the usual type of tenure legislation and becomes operative at the close of this academic year.

The Pennsylvania law, although not a strictly tenure bill, provided a continuing contract for all teachers in the public school service. Teacher contracts automatically renew themselves annually unless terminated by the teacher or by formal dismissal by the school board.

"The committee is awaiting with much interest the result of this experiment," says the report, which will be presented Tuesday morning and probably will be followed by a discussion of means to have tenure laws universally adopted.

The committee on retirement allowances also will make its report Tuesday. This committee will report that State teacher retirement systems are in effect in half of the 48 States. Efforts will be made during the next year to add four more States—Alabama, Colorado, New Hampshire and Utah—to the list having State-wide systems, the report says.

The report finds that the theory of most of the retirement systems now in effect favors a system supported by both the State and by the teachers.

The first general session of the association began tonight with addresses on the vital values in education. This subject was discussed from the standpoint of the schools by Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools at Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs, of Austin, Tex., past president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, told what can be done in the home. The function of the church in education was described by Bishop William F. was described by Bishop William F. Church.

GANG HAUNTS RAIDED FOR LINGLE'S SLAYER

Wisconsin Forest Hide-Outs Combed by Squads of Crack Detectives.

FORSYTHE ELUDES HUNT

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—A handpicked detective squad swept into the Wisconsin woods early today in an effort to capture Ames B. "Red" Forsythe, hunted as the slayer of Alfred Lingle. Although the officers broke into several alleged hoodlum hideouts in the vicinity of Burlington, the fugitive could not be found.

A dozen officers, under command of George S. Lavin, assistant United States district attorney, participated in the raids which were prompted by information that Forsythe and two companions wanted in connection with the murder—Simon Gorman and Frank Noonan—were harbored there.

The squads reached their destination before dawn and combed the entire Brown's Lake district, entering every questionable resort, without finding their quarry.

The first place searched was the Shady Rest Club, operated by "Big George" Vogel, notorious Chicago gangster.

Vogel was not visibly surprised at the visit, they reported, and denied glibly that he had housed the three fugitives or that he had ever heard of them.

The raiding party believes that their approach was observed by wary guards who relayed the intelligence to Forsythe, Noonan and Gorman, permitting them to escape.

Meanwhile the official commission investigating the Lingle murder strove to ascertain the source of the reporter's income. Their work was based in part on a bundle of canceled checks and bank records, which revealed that he deposited $63,000 in the Lake Shore Trust & Savings Bank during the 30-month period which preceded his death.

The investigation has spread cancer-wise to many stratas of society and has brought three dozen persons—public office holders, police officials, business men and gangsters alike—under scrutiny as the slaying moved slowly toward solution.

Authorities agree that the execution was performed at the instance of the Aiello-Moran mob. The predominant motive, they believe, was to effect the upheaval that resulted in the removal of Police Commissioner Russell, who virtually cut off the North Side organizations revenue through a series of raids upon their thriving night clubs, gambling houses and saloons.

The Tribune tomorrow will say editorially that "the reasonable appearance against Alfred Lingle (slain Tribune reporter) now is that he was accepted into the field of politics and crime for something undreamed of in his office and that he used this in undertakings which made him money and brought him death."

"When Lingle was shot by an assassin," the editorial said, "the Tribune assumed that the criminals * * * were beginning their attack upon newspaper exposure. The other newspapers took the same view * * * The preliminary investigation has modified some of the first assumptions. * * *

"Alfred Lingle now takes on a different character, one in which he was unknown to the management of the Tribune when he was alive. He is dead, and can not defend himself, but many facts now revealed must be accepted as eloquent against him.

"* * * The Tribune, although naturally disturbed by the discovery that this reporter was engaged in practices contrary to the code of its honest reporters and abhorred by the policy of the newspaper, does not find that the main objectives of the inquiry have been much altered. The crime and the criminals remain, and they are the concern of the Tribune, as they are of the decent elements of Chicago. * * *

"The murder of this reporter, even for racketeering reasons, as the evidence indicates it may have been, made a breach in the wall which criminality has so long maintained about its operations here."

CHIEF OF ZIONISTS APPEALS TO LEAGUE

Lipsky Asks That Britain Be Made to Live Up to Her Mandate.

RIGHTS ARE HELD DENIED

Cleveland, June 29 (A.P.).—An appeal to the League of Nations to assure that "justice be done" in administration of the mandate held by the government of Great Britain over Palestine was made today by Louis Lipsky, president of the Zionist Organization of America, in his annual presidential message before the opening session of the thirty-third Zionist convention. Lipsky has submitted his resignation as president.

Great Britain has shown "utter incapacity" to administer the mandate over the Jewish homeland, Lipsky charged.

Referring to the recent suspension of Jewish immigration into Palestine and issuance of a White Paper by the British government, Lipsky said these had aroused the indignation of world Jewry and added that "there will be no diminution of that progress until the order to suspend immigration is revoked, until the latest White Paper is supplanted by a program calculated to carry into effect the letter and spirit of the mandate."

Would Maintain Rights.

"The right accorded to Jewish people under the mandate," he continued, "can not be withdrawn or temporarily suspended for the purpose of suiting the convenience of the mandatory government. A trust remains a trust, no matter how difficult it may be to execute it, and so long as England holds the mandate, profits by its presence in Palestine, so long will the world expect England to keep its pledge and to discharge its trust regardless of difficulties."

Troubles encountered in "our struggle for national redemption" during the past year make all preceding difficulties trivial and unimpressive, Lipsky said. "In fact, we are living through an attack of major proportions, affecting the foundations, disturbing the very heart of the movement."

The riots in Palestine last August, in which numerous Jews were killed in battles with Arabs, and persecution which has followed the August events, has utterly destroyed the faith of Jews in possibility of bringing the Arabs to see the value of Jewish participation in rebirth of the land, Lipsky added.

"With the August events came also the conviction of the utter incapacity of the mandatory government to appreciate the meaning of the trust involved in the mandate.

Criminal Plot Charged.

"Evidence clearly showed a criminal conspiracy on the part of the Arabs to attack Jewish life and property. There was no suggestion that Jews had occasioned this attack upon themselves.

"The culmination of the wavering policy of the government was the stoppage of labor immigration and the issuing of a new White Paper.

"Against that White Paper, as well as against the stoppage of labor immigration, the protest of the whole Jewish world has been uttered."

A message from President Hoover was read to the inaugural session. It read:

"Please extend my cordial greetings to the convention of the Zionist Organization of America, and my deep appreciation of their services to the spiritual life of the Jewish race. I have followed with deep interest the occurrences in the last year in Palestine, and wish to assure the convention not only of my sympathy with them in their problem, but of my hope that the discouragement of the moment will presently be removed and the work of advancing Jewish aspirations will go forward to even greater success."

Girl Dives to Save Two Drowning; All Perish

Vineland, N. J., June 29 (A.P.).—Although she could not swim, a 19-year-old girl dived fearlessly into 50 feet of water today in an effort to help her drowning sister and boy cousin. She died with them.

Her name was Gussie Brown. The others were Pearl Brown, 16, and Walter Pettit, all of South Vineland.

SWIMMER MISSING, POLICE DRAG RIVER

Sergt. C. R. Dray, of Marine Corps, Disappears Under Eyes of Friends.

SECOND MAN DROWNED

nal, when a member of the party discovered that Dray was missing.

They recalled, according to the police, that Dray last had been seen swimming, a half hour or longer earlier, alone in the middle of the canal, which at that point is about three city blocks wide.

Dragging Is Begun.

A search immediately was instituted by the Marines. None could advance any explanation for the disappearance. They said he apparently was in splendid health, that he had given no indication of flagging strength in the water, and that he positively made no outcry of distress, although opposite sides of the canal are within easy hearing distance.

Montgomery County police began dragging operations, which later were halted by difficulties of working in darkness. They planned to resume dragging early today.

The Marine Barracks reported that Sergt. Dray was born in Jewett, Ohio, and that his next of kin was his father, Alzia L. Dray, of Carrollton, Ohio. He had been in Marine service approximately two and one-half years being stationed at the barracks here during the greater part of this time.

Harold Andrews Drowns.

Seized with a heart attack while swimming among a large crowd of bathers in the Severn River at Herald Harbor, Md., young Andrews, 22 years old, of 828 Concord avenue northwest, an employe at the Washington Terminal, was drowned in several feet of water yesterday afternoon.

Persuaded to accompany a party of friends to the resort, where numerous Washingtonians occupy summer cottages, Andrews finally went in the water, although complaining that he had been in poor physical condition recently. With him was his sister, Miss Virginia Andrews, 20 years old.

Stricken while in the water, he slumped beneath the surface. Currents shifted the body to a point a short distance away, where life guards recovered it early last night. Police Justice Louis M. Hopkins, acting as coroner, gave a verdict of accidental drowning.

Andrews was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar L. Andrews, with whom he and his sister made their home.

REFUSAL OF SLEMP STIRS SPECULATION

Desires Only to Keep Post as State G. O. P. Head, Observers Say.

SOME CRITICISM HEARD

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., June 29.—Speculation as to C. Bascom Slemp's future status as Virginia Republican leader is now rife following the national committeeman's refusal to accept his party's congressional nomination in the Ninth District and his apparent lack of interest in the proposal that he offer for United States senator against Carter Glass next November.

Observers see in Mr. Slemp's refusal to make any race this fall his chief desire to retain his present party position as national committeeman and political adviser to the Virginia G. O. P., a post he has held for years, especially with regard to national activities.

Added to this, Mr. Slemp is said to feel that he has served his party for fifteen years in Congress, which is enough, and that he should be allowed to conduct his personal law practice and remain in the political background. Friends say that his actual participation in any campaign as candidate might affect his law practice, especially that before Government departments in Washington.

This attitude, however, is not at all satisfactory to many Virginia Republicans. There is considerable rumbling of dissatisfaction that Mr. Slemp did not take the leadership in the Ninth District congressional fight. There are Republican leaders here and there who feel that the party leadership should pass into more progressive hands than Mr. Slemp's. They want the Republicans to become a factor in State elections, pointing out that with proper leadership the party can be strengthened beyond the 100,000 votes polled for Dr. William Moseley Brown, the coalition candidate for governor, last fall.

The anti-Slemp men are anxious for Henry W. Anderson, of Richmond, a member of President Hoover's law enforcement commission, to assume the State Republican leadership. They assert that he will build up the party for State contests, whereas Mr. Slemp always has concentrated his activities on the congressional fight in the Ninth district.

Mr. Anderson has been anxious for the Republicans to make an earnest effort for State offices, instead of merely naming candidates to make an anti-Democratic fight. However, he has no thought of precipitating an open break in the party and is said to be satisfied to allow matters to run as they have been.

Any movement to replace Mr. Slemp as Virginia Republican national committeeman in 1932—as the situation appears today—has little chance of success. Mr. Slemp has the organization behind him. He is fortified with a prestige in national party circles shared by no other Virginia leader. The opposition to him is not organized and apparently will not be in 1932. While dissatisfaction frequently is expressed to his leadership, it is not likely to come to a fight in the open.

His friends, defending his refusal to make the Ninth district fight this fall, say that he realizes that the Republicans face a stiff battle in view of present economic conditions, affecting rural and industrial southwest Virginia.

On top of this now comes the British embargo against Virginia apples, which Democrats claim is a direct result of the recently enacted American tariff.

THREE CITIES HUNT VAINLY FOR OCKER

used the car in making his escape after the double assault.

Because it is feared that he may go to Baltimore, where relatives of his wife reside, police of that city also are alert for his appearance.

The homes of Ocker's two brothers-in-law in suburbs of Baltimore also are being guarded by police, as he is said to hold them responsible for the discord in his family, and it is believed he may be on his way there in quest of vengeance.

The homes guarded are those of Hershall Allen, of Towson, Md., and Wendell D. Allen, of Walbrook, Md., who, with Mrs. Ocker, are the children of the late Senator Newton D. R. Allen, of Maryland. A telegram telling of the shooting in Detroit and believed to have contained a threat by Ocker has been received by Wendell Allen, who immediately applied to Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither, of Baltimore, for protection.

Two Mexicans Killed In Border Rum Battle

Laredo, Tex., June 29 (A.P.).—Juan Espinosa, 35, of Laredo, was shot and killed early today by United States border patrolmen as he and four companions were attempting to cross the Rio Grande into the United States with sacks of liquor.

Mexican customs officers captured three of Espinosa's companions. Two of them were wounded, one Jesus Cantu, dying afterward. Mexican authorities reported. The fourth man escaped. Espinosa was grasping a loaded pistol in his hand when he fell mortally wounded by the charges from the sawed-off shotguns of the border patrolmen, who fired at close range.

President's Resignation Demanded in Warsaw

Warsaw, June 29 (A.P.).—The center and left parties of the Polish Diet in a convention at Krakow today adopted a resolution demanding liquidation of the government of Premier Walery Slavek and the resignation of President Moscicki. The quarrel between the present cabinet, backed by Marshal Pilsudski, and the center and left parties, is of long standing.

Meetings, attended by about 30,000 persons, voted resolutions of confidence in President Moscicki and Marshal Pilsudski, censuring the convention of the left and center parties.

FRENCH WILL LEAVE RHINELAND TONIGHT

Evacuation of Last German Territory to Be Marked by Bells and Fires.

OFFICIAL FETE IN JULY

Mayence, Germany, June 29 (A.P.). The German Rhineland tonight stands on the threshold of freedom.

Tomorrow afternoon the last train-load of French troops will steam out of the third occupied zone, and at the stroke of midnight the pealing of church bells and the flare of bonfires up and down the River Rhine will herald the official termination of 11½ years of allied occupation of German soil.

The achievement of the goal toward which the Reich's foreign policy has been striving for ten years will be formally and elaborately celebrated in the middle of July.

Tour by Hindenburg.

President von Hindenburg then will make a tour of the Rhineland.

The populace, however, is not content to wait for the official rejoicing. A spontaneous celebration of regained liberty, unique in the history of the fatherland, is expected to break loose when the midnight bells and bonfires and the broadcasting stations tell 60,000,000 Germans that the French army has finally moved out of the Rhineland.

The French Rhine fleet, with the engineer corps aboard, left here for Strasbourg today, and all barracks hitherto occupied by the French army were turned over to the German authorities, except one that will house the French guard of honor for the hauling down of the allied colors tomorrow.

Gen. Guillaumat, commander of the French army of occupation, paid a formal visit of farewell to the German commissioner of the occupied zone.

Special Stamps Sold.

At 5 p. m. tomorrow, the German police force intended for Mayence, after assembling across the Rhine at Mayence-Kastel, will parade with martial music across the bridge into the city. This will be the signal for the simultaneous hoisting of German flags on all public buildings.

Postoffices are selling stamps picturing President von Hindenburg and former President Ebert and marked with the final evacuation date.

On the eve of the final freedom of the Rhineland there remain unsettled the problems of the Saar Basin, to be settled by plebiscite in 1934, and of the eastern frontier, particularly in regard to Poland.

SURPLUS EXPECTED TO BE $200,000,000

in the last month. Those collections, which had dropped off $40,000,000 in comparison with the previous year, took an upward bound just before the tariff law went into effect so that on Thursday the total of such revenue for the year aggregated $583,275,000, which was $12,000,000 less than collected in the same period of the 1929 year.

Part of the surplus this year was due to foreign nations making their June 15 payments on war debts to this country in cash instead of in United States securities as had been the practice. This added $100,000,000 to the surplus, but Secretary Mellon in opposing the passage of the original World War veterans relief act, said the Government was faced with a deficit next year due to increased appropriations for public buildings to help relieve the unemployment situation. At the same time, he pointed out, the Government expected less revenue next year because of the 1930 business depression.

Appropriation bills enacted at the present session of Congress which are to be paid in the 1931 fiscal year starting tomorrow amount to approximately $4,500,000,000, which is more than the revenue it is estimated the Government will collect next year. The total for the present year, ending today, will be approximately $4,200,000,000, and with less revenue expected next year, a deficit seems certain. This condition, however, has existed in previous years and the Government has, through exercising economy, finished the year with a surplus.

NAVAL TREATY HELD UNJUST IN MINORITY REPORT ON PACT

matter pertinent to the provisions of the treaty.

The facts relating to the demand for the secret documents are given in an addenda to the minority report. The signers maintain that the prestige of some future foreign relations committee may be jeopardized unless the precedent established in connection with the London Treaty be accurately understood.

Conclusions of Minority.

The conclusions in the minority report are given as follows:

"1. It abandons the American naval policy, sustained for more than a century, and especially with regard to the protection of American commerce on the high seas.

"2. The splendid example of sacrifice made by our country in 1922, and thereafter our marked restraint in naval building, have actually been utilized to our detriment, and have been made the excuse for still further sacrifices, unmatched by any other nation.

"3. At Washington in 1922 our great superiority in battleship power was emasculated without commensurate return. Now our great superiority in destroyers and submarines is similarly eliminated without material compensation. Both at Washington and at London British diplomacy succeeded in doing this to us, while at the same time retaining Great Britain's superiority in cruiser forces, with which they went into both conferences.

"4. The London treaty destroys the 5-5-3 ratio so dearly bought at Washington.

"5. The surrender of the 5-5-3 ratio greatly reduces our ability to protect a rapidly growing trade, which has already reached proportions of first magnitude, and upon which American business, prosperity, and livelihood vitally depend.

Denies Parity Is Given.

"6. The treaty does not give us parity with Great Britain in naval vessels, and leaves us far from parity in naval power or commerce protection.

"7. By leaving to Japan and Great Britain battle cruisers, which could only be partly compensated for by allowance to the United States of needed 8-inch-gun cruisers, a further and additional advantage is given Japan and Great Britain.

"8. We are denied the kind and number of cruisers our needs demand.

"9. We can build the cruisers Great Britain 'permits' us to build, but not those we ourselves, because of our requirements, desire to build.

"10. The treaty hamstrings us in the Pacific by its unjustified and unfair increase in the ratio of Japan. It keeps us to our bargain not to strengthen our far Pacific bases, yielded as the consideration for the ratio, while permitting the other party to the bargain to evade its obligations.

Expense Burden Seen.

"11. The treaty makes no saving to our taxpayers. On the contrary, if acted upon, it adds a billion dollars to our expenditures. It is a billion-dollar treaty for the purchase of naval inferiority.

"And lastly, the treaty may imperil our vast sea-borne commerce, and endanger our country's future. It is unfair and unjust to the United States, and it should not be ratified."

Denying opposition to "an equitable arrangement for limiting naval armaments," the report states:

"The minority of the foreign relations committee, opposing the treaty, disclaim either militarism or jingoism, and insist that its few members have ever been and still are advocates of fair limitation and honest naval reduction.

"The minority, however, demand that no treaty in respect to the United States Navy shall be ratified by the Senate which is disadvantageous to our country, which precludes an adequate national defense, which affects injuriously the naval protection of our enormous and fast-expanding sea commerce or which destructively deals with our relative position in respect to other nations.

Surrender by U. S. Seen.

"All these things the London treaty does, and because it does these things, and because it is neither fair nor just to the United States, we oppose it."

The report asserts that America has surrendered the stand taken at the Geneva conference of 1927.

"The controversy at Geneva," the report states, "was a conflict between the naval policy of Great Britain and the naval policy of the United States. On the one hand, Great Britain insisted upon the division of cruisers into two categories, and refused absolutely to permit the United States to build, within the tonnage limitation allowed, such cruisers as the United States desired. The United States demanded this right, which it readily accorded to Great Britain. Great Britain demanded the right to direct what we should do. Great Britain failed at Geneva. Great Britain won at London."

The report refers to confidential information showing that President Hoover obtained an agreement from Prime Minister MacDonald at the Rapidan conference last fall whereby America was to be permitted to build a superdreadnought of the Rodney type to approach battleship parity with the British.

The British admiralty overruled MacDonald, according to the minority report, and America, therefore, was not permitted by the British to construct this ship.

Naval Experts Upheld.

The British first lord of the admiralty is now defending the treaty, the report states, adding that the Japanese as well as the British naval experts are in favor of the pact, and stating that the opposition to the treaty in Great Britain and Japan is not at all comparable to the opposition voiced in America. In the United States, the report declares, the opposition comes from an almost unanimous naval opinion, while in Great Britain and Japan naval experts approve of the pact.

"Who knows best the naval requirements of the United States?" the report asks.

"Apparently it is insisted that hysterical internationalists, whose thoughts are with any but their own people, should determine the naval necessities of our country.

"This minority prefers to trust the defense of America to those upon whom it rests in time of peril."

Martial Law Declared In Honduras Red Unrest

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, June 29 (A.P.).—The Honduran government today declared martial law in four departments forming the Atlantic coast region to prevent communistic disturbances.

Forty foreigners said to be agitators were deported, and others were arrested. Among those arrested was the well-known Nicaraguan leader, Toribio Tejerino. The press, all labor associations, and public opinion seemed today to be supporting President Mejia Colindres in the emergency. Officials believed all danger had been forestalled by the measures taken.

Virgil Tacy of Council Bluffs, Ia., won four scholarships to the University of Iowa, one to Drake University and a $50 cash scholarship.

GOLF COURSE CRASH KILLS PAIR IN PLANE

Army Reserve Airmen From Mitchel Field Die in Plunge of Craft.

AUTOS NEARLY STRUCK

Garden City, N. Y., June 25 (A.P.). Lieut. Benjamin Berkowitz and Capt. Albert E. Flood, Army reserve airmen, were killed late today when their training plane from Mitchel Field crashed on a golf course here.

The plane, which was believed to have developed motor trouble, struck a steel fence and hedge on the edge of the Meadowbrook Country Club, crashed across a road, carried away a 12-foot iron fence of the Salisbury Country Club and came to a stop on the latter course, a tangled mass of wreckage.

Both men died instantly and their bodies were taken to Mitchel Field immediately, while a cordon of soldiers surrounded the wreckage preventing news photographers from taking pictures. Some newspapermen were beaten when they attempted to obtain pictures and information.

The two men had been in the air a half hour on a training flight. Witnesses said they came down in a long spiral to a height of about 100 feet, after which the plane seemed to get out of control.

The road across which the plane cartwheeled after hitting the first fence is congested with traffic on Sunday and it was considered almost a miracle that an automobile was not struck. Hundreds of golfers and motorists saw the accident.

Lieut. Berkowitz was 35 years old, lived in New York City and was a real estate man. Capt. Flood, who was 42, was assistant principal of a public school in The Bronx.

New Bedford, Mass., June 29 (A.P.). Omer Dumas, 23, a student flier at the Round Hill Airport, drowned today when his plane went into a spin and dived into Buzzards Bay about a mile off shore. Dumas' body had not been located tonight.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 29 (A.P.).—Spencer Brown, 27, of Cheektowaga, student pilot and member of the Eagle Rock Flying Club, lost his life tonight in making his first parachute jump. At 2,500 feet he leaped from a plane piloted by George Terrill, of Kenmore. The parachute opened, but Brown landed in a tree and his neck was broken. Passing motorists witnessed the accident and lowered Brown with ropes. He died on the way to a hospital.

Father Trails Man In Slaying of Son

Leads Police to Suspect He Says Committed Deed Two Years Ago.

Chicago, June 29 (A. P.) Detectives had almost forgotten the case, but Martin Flatow kept up the search for the slayer of his 24-year-old son, Harry.

Today, two years after Harry had been slain, the father led police to a North Side apartment, pointed out Mike Walsh alias Miles Mullen, and said: "There's our man."

Walsh has been under indictment for the slaying for nearly two years. With Walsh in the apartment were Mrs. Mary Flatow, widow of the slain man and niece of the alleged slayer. Walsh's wife and his sister also were there.

"Mike Walsh did it; we quarrelled" Flatow had declared as he died. Walsh denied the charge today.

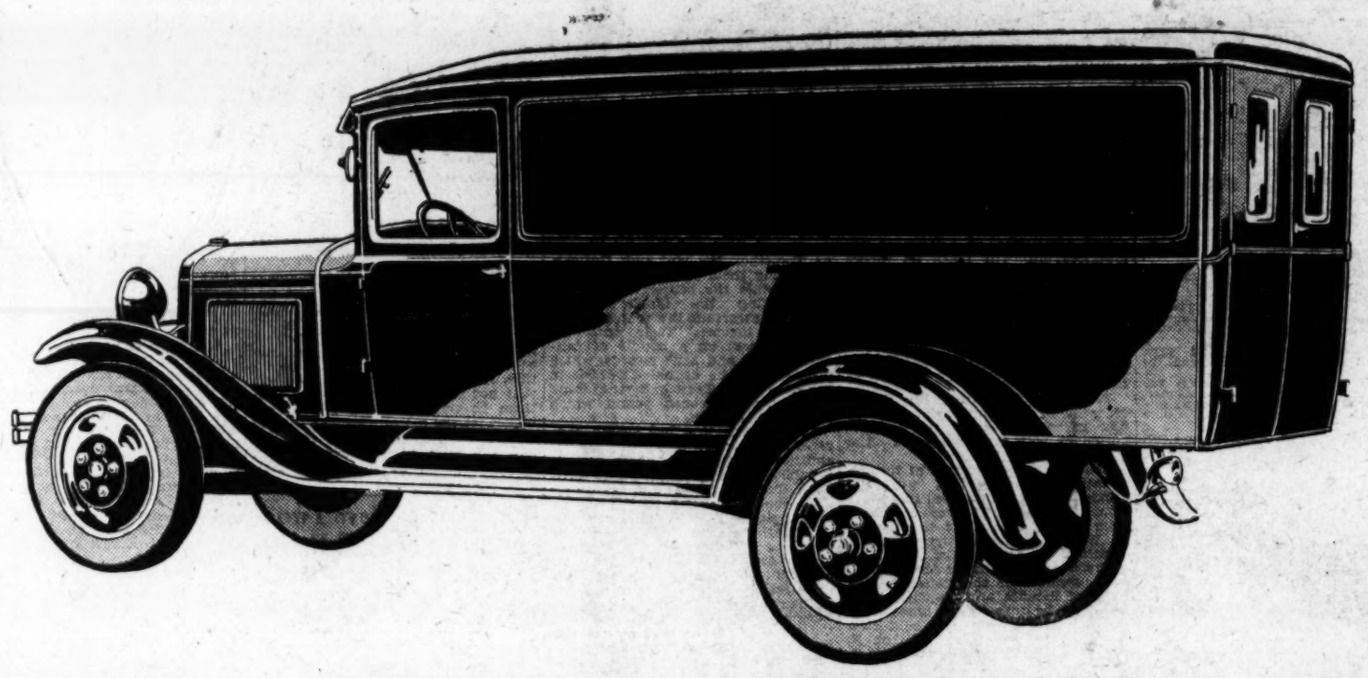
The Ford is a good-looking truck



Ford 1½-ton truck with panel body

THE Ford truck, with new bodies of greater beauty, is designed to be a fitting representative of your business in any community. The new radiator and hood are higher and narrower, in more pleasing proportion to the overall height of the body and cab. Front fenders meet the running-boards in a more sweeping and graceful line.

The radiator, hood, cowl and cab are unified in appearance, joining in a line which seemingly lengthens the truck, increasing the impression of fleetness. A smart-looking visor of military shape adds further to this impression.

Greater comfort for the driver is provided by roomier cabs, with wider seats. The windshields, which are of Triplex shatter-proof glass, operate by swinging out from the bottom. Both open and enclosed cabs are offered with the stake and platform bodies.

Valuable as these body improvements are, they are second in importance to the excellent performance, long life, and rugged strength which the Ford truck offers at low cost. Features of the chassis which contribute to these are the 4-speed transmission; the new three-quarter floating rear axle; the option of two different gear-ratios; the larger brakes; and the dual rear wheels available at small additional cost.

Panel, stake and platform bodies are standard. They are sturdy and rugged, designed to give ample loading space. With the important new chassis features, they adapt the Ford truck for a wide variety of purposes.

PRESIDENT RETURNS FROM STAY IN CAMP

Hoover, Refreshed by Outing, Faces Final Problems of Congress.

FIRST LADY IS IMPROVED

(Associated Press.)

Refreshed by a week-end spent at his Virginia fishing camp, President Hoover arrived at the White House last night to face problems incident to the final days of Congress.

One of the Chief Executive's anxieties was relieved when he found Mrs. Hoover, whom he had not seen for three weeks, improved by days of rest at the camp, where she has been convalescing from a wrenched back. She was out driving in an automobile when the President arrived but returned a few minutes later.

Capt. Joel T. Boone, White House physician, who was a member of the party, said Mrs. Hoover had improved sufficiently to return to the Capital, but is remaining at the camp because of the excessive heat in the city.

President Hoover expects to return to the camp next week-end, possibly spending the Fourth of July as well as Saturday and Sunday there, if the legislative situation in Congress permits.

He was accompanied yesterday by Secretary Hurley, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of War Payne, Col. Abel Davis, of Chicago, and Capt. Boone.

After the presidential party left the Rapidan River camp, coolness of the mountains was quickly followed by heat of the lowlands, and the drive home was made through a sweltering temperature with clouds of dust at times enveloping the cars.

Youngster's Attempt to Scale Rocks on Potomac Branch Fatal.

Cumberland, Md., June 29.—Charles Arthur Beggs, 16, son of W. Va., at the camp of the Cumberland Boy Scouts. Young Beggs died on the operating table at Allegany Hospital here about an hour later.

Since Tuesday young Beggs had been at the camp with seven other elder scouts under Frank B. Gale, scout executive, and William Duke, scoutmaster, preparing the camp for the opening on July 7. Late this morning, while Scout Executive Gale and Scoutmaster Duke were in their tent, young Beggs with several other scouts waded to the opposite side of the river and Beggs started the ascent of the 200-foot cliff. He had not reached the top when he slipped and fell backward about 25 feet, landing on his head on the sharp shale. Beggs was the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Beggs and was a student of La Salle Institute and an attendant at Emmanuel Episcopal Church. He was attached to Troop No. 5 of Green Street Junior High School.

NO TARIFF WAR.

If any foreign government should weakly submit to the demands of selfish commercial interests and attempt to retaliate against the United States because this country has enacted a new tariff law, it will soon repent of its folly. In the game of commercial retaliation the United States has all the advantage, and can easily bring any foreign government to terms.

The French government, which permitted threats of reprisal to be widely published, has seen the handwriting on the wall. It has now decided to await arrival of the official text of the new American tariff before making any representations. After it has examined the law it will find that it has no grounds of complaint, and that a policy of retaliation would work great injury to France.

American tourists have been contributing to French pocketbooks three times as much as France is paying on its debt to America. Tourist receipts have already begun to fall off as a result of French cupidity, and France's neighbors have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity to divert the stream of American tourists. Splendid steamships now convey American tourists direct to Germany, Spain and Italy, and it is no longer necessary to pay tribute to France.

The embargo imposed by the British government upon apples from the United States is regarded in some quarters as an act of reprisal against the new tariff law, although the official explanation of the embargo is that it is necessary to prevent importation of infected fruit. Experience will soon determine the facts. If the embargo is the beginning of a commercial controversy between Great Britain and the United States the ramifications of the quarrel will surprise British shipping, insurance, and commercial interests. It is impossible to accept the theory that the British government will welcome a struggle with the United States in any field whatever. Every expression by British statesmen reveals that Great Britain in its present critical position can not afford to forfeit the friendship and cooperation of the United States.

The United States tariff does not discriminate against any foreign government or foreign interest. The customhouses are open to foreign commodities without regard to their origin. The protectiye duties are levied solely for the benefit of Americans. No objections are raised by the United States when foreign nations impose protective tariffs. Ninety per cent of foreign tariffs are higher than the American tariff. American producers sell their goods abroad in spite of high tariffs. If the nations should invite commercial suicide by starting tariff wars against the United States, American producers would remain in possession of the richest market in the world, while foreign producers would be deprived of the market that now consumes an enormous share of their commodities.

Foreign nations will think twice before they cut themselves off from their best customer.

TOO MUCH WHEAT.

Next Tuesday the Department of Agriculture will make public an "outlook report on the world wheat situation, indicating the long-time trends in world production and prices and the facts that growers should consider as a basis for planning their operations." Publication of the study will mark the inauguration of a series of discussions by Chairman Legge, of the Farm Board, and Secretary Hyde on the subject of wheat acreage adjustment through cooperative planning, with emphasis upon the vital need of proper adjustment in the principal winter wheat States. The present situation with respect to wheat illustrates this need.

July wheat is selling for around 90 cents, September wheat is quoted at around 94, and December wheat at around $1. Low prices prevail despite the fact that the Farm Board last winter stepped into the market with its pockets lined with Government money, purchasing wheat in enormous volume, at a premium, with the avowed intention of pegging the price. No one knows how much wheat the board purchased, nor, for that matter, how much it now holds. There is no doubt, however, that the board holds a vast store of grain and that its paper loss is large.

But the price of wheat has not been pegged. The reason is that price is established by demand in connection with available supply, and the available supply for the moment is out of proportion to the current demand. Inasmuch as the Government is holding a large store of wheat that must be disposed of at some future time, the reduction of wheat production is of vital interest to every taxpayer. It is to be hoped that the department's "outlook report" will point the way to solution of the wheat problem, and that the conferences on acreage adjustment will be productive of positive result.

THE VETERANS' BILL.

There is nothing in the veterans' relief bill as it has been changed by the finance committee of the Senate which is apt to bring about a prolonged controversy. The Senate committee refused to increase the maximum pension to $60, and the Democrats who demand the increase will make a fight for it on the floor. The House provision excluding veterans who pay income tax from the benefits of the bill was stricken out by the Senate committee. Men who enlisted subsequent to the armistice are included in the beneficiaries under the Senate committee's amendment.

The most important change proposed by the Senate committee is the consolidation of all veterans' agencies under a single establishment to be known as the Veterans' Administration. Under it would be placed the Veterans' Bureau, the Bureau of Pensions, and other agencies. There is determined opposition to this proposed consolidation, because of the fear that many jobs would be abolished.

Under the spur of hot weather and political fence-mending necessities Congress will try to deal with the veterans' bill without running into another deadlock or presidential veto. The country is reconciled with the knowledge that it must face a large outlay in behalf of disabled veterans. There is no objection to a bill that will actually give relief to veterans entitled to it. Politics should be forgotten for a while and the pending bill passed.

TARIFF HELPS AGRICULTURE.

In a letter to President Thompson, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, and to the State farm bureaus, Chester H. Gray, Washington representative of the organization, submits an exhaustive analysis of the new tariff as it affects agriculture. The opponents of the Hawley-Smoot bill, when the measure was under discussion, attempted to prove that the object aimed at when the extra session was called by President Hoover, namely, to afford relief to agriculture, had been ignored, and that the few benefits which might be derived from the increase in agricultural rates were overbalanced completely by the "unwarranted and inexcusable" increases levied against everything which the farmer must buy.

False as were these arguments, they served the purpose of the politicians, and during the next few months the country will be flooded with franked copies of the orations against the bill which filled so many pages of the Congressional Record.

Unfortunately the letter of Mr. Gray to the great farm organization will not have as wide circulation, for the reason that it has not been published in the Record and can not be sent out under a frank. To those who have the opportunity to read that letter, however, it will be instructive as well as interesting to consult the tables in which Mr. Gray gives the total value of various groups of agricultural products imported in 1928, together with the duties paid upon those imports under the law then and the amount of duty which would have to be paid upon the same imports under the Hawley-Smoot act.

In his summaries the compiler shows that the percentage of increase of duty under the act of 1930 upon agricultural products in their natural state, plus such products as have been partly processed, is 32.04%, while that of industrial products is but 10.5%.

The Federal Farm Bureau is not a political organization. It holds no brief for the Republicans of the House or Senate. Mr. Gray's duty is to report the naked facts. He is far better qualified to know how the tariff act will affect the farmer than those who are inspired by political motives in opposition to the new tariff.

As to the administrative features of the new act, Mr. Gray calls attention to the fact that the flexible provision of the law has been retained, in approximate accord with the position of the Farm Bureau. The provision for domestic valuation rather than foreign valuation in certain cases is regarded as a benefit to agriculture. Also the bureau's suggestions as to drawback on flour and preferential rates on flour milled in bond were adopted, to the entire satisfaction of agriculture as represented by the organization.

BIDDY AMERICANUS.

Four bureaus of the Department of Agriculture have cooperated in the preparation and publication of a neat little booklet which will be used to present to the world, through the fourth world's poultry congress in London next month, the biography, achievements, and economic value of Biddy Americanus, the American hen. Not only have these bureaus produced a volume which will be greatly appreciated by the poultry raisers of the universe, but they have added a chapter which should materially increase the world's appetite for poultry. This chapter imparts to housewives the sublime secret of roast turkey, stuffed with chestnuts and how to prepare "chicken Maryland," besides numerous other recipes that have contributed to the welfare of the United States and the honor of the American hen.

In addition to the literary production of the four stupendous bureaus, and the 58 appropriate pictures that are incorporated in the brochure, there is a "foreword" by Secretary Hyde himself, in which the Cabinet officer assures the members of the poultry congress and everybody else that "the future welfare of this great industry is so closely linked with technical, educational and commercial developments in other countries that the United States seeks the inspiration that arises from poultry discussions of international scope."

The booklet directs attention to the importance of the poultry industry in earnings of American farmers. It shows that the poultry and egg business in recent years has produced an annual income of more than $1,000,000,000, or approximately one-tenth of the farm income of the nation.

After the adjournment of the world's poultry congress it should be possible for gourmets to obtain in any restaurant in foreign countries those renowned dishes that celebrate the industry and toothsomeness of Biddy Americanus. The United States contributes this blessing to the world freely and without price.

INTERSTATE BUS TRAFFIC

Remarks by Mr. Kean, of New Jersey, in the Senate, June 27

A chaotic condition has been the result of the absence of a law to regulate interstate busses. The public welfare has not been kept in mind; the fares charged by the unregulated lines have varied, and in a great many instances to the extent that a rate fixed one day would be changed again the next day. Unsafe and insanitary busses have been utilized; absence of financial responsibility in case of injury or death, the fixing of routes for the convenience of patrons, the using of highways without any return, and the necessity arising for additional police regulation, all tend to make for confusion and loss to the municipalities through which the busses pass. New Jersey, because of its location, is traversed by nearly one-fifth of all the busses engaged in interstate traffic and contains more than one-tenth of all the companies so engaged. The necessity of control of interstate busses is not alone confined to New Jersey, but is a problem which every State in the Union is daily facing in greater or less degree. It is a method of travel that is constantly on the increase, and it is a fact that interstate regulation must eventually be provided and ample provision made for this mode of travel.

The Interstate Commerce Commission realizes that the traveling public must be protected. At the present time the public has no protection whatsoever, except as may be provided by reliable carriers—those carriers which have ample assets to pay damages resulting from an accident and incurred while being carried by interstate busses. The Interstate Commerce Commission made a report in which is found the following language:

> With no law regulating interstate commerce carried over the public highways such commerce can now be, and is, carried on by as many as desire, regardless of financial responsibility, and free from the slightest control or regulation as to routes, fares, schedules, public convenience and necessity, and comfort or safety of passengers. Operators engaged in such business are not required to report to any authority and, save for the public regulations of States and municipalities, are subject to none. They may operate at their pleasure and may cease operation temporarily or permanently as they choose. There is nothing to prevent them from discriminating unduly and competing unfairly. The public using such lines have no governmental agency of any description to which they may appeal in the matter of rates, routes, schedules, or safety in the use of public highways.

A bus line may take out insurance, but such insurance covers only an injury that may be done to a person not a passenger on the bus; in other words, an injury done to a person on the highway. The bus industry is a growing one. It is a popular mode of travel. It touches points that are not accessible to railroads. It is a comfortable means of transportation. Business is solicited by the bus companies, and people use this mode of transportation without any thought of regulation by proper authority. Under present conditions an interstate bus is not governed by any law, and it is due to the traveling public that their interests should be protected to as great a degree as their interests are protected by any other mode of interstate travel.

Legislation by Federal authority is the only remedy for this situation, as the States do not have the power to control it.

The Interstate Commerce Commission further stated:

> The regulation of interstate commerce by motor vehicles operating as common carriers of passengers on the public highways over regular routes or between fixed termini should be provided for by law.

Since the Supreme Court has decided that the several States do not have the right to restrain or regulate interstate motor carriers, every State board of utility commissioners has expressed the same views.

The growth of this industry in the last five years has justified the recommendations of public officials who urged regulation. For instance, in 1925 there were 53,200 motor busses in operation. In 1929 this number had increased to 92,400.

In 1925 the number of miles covered by motor busses was in the neighborhood of 345,500 miles.

In 1929 this mileage had increased to 719,500.

In 1925 the number of bus miles, all common carriers, amounted to 971,000,000 miles.

In 1929 it had reached 1,760,000,000.

In 1925 the passengers carried numbered 870,000,000, and in 1929 the number had increased to 1,793,000,000. The gross revenue increased from $186,000,000 in 1925 to $366,000,000 in 1929, and the total investment had increased from $236,000,000 in 1926 to $531,000,000 in 1929.

The bus as a mode of transportation is a very popular one, and there is no doubt that it has become a permanent mode of travel and has reached such proportions that regulation by the Federal Government, supplementing State regulation, is imperative.

JUST A MOMENT.

By STEPHEN B. STANTON.

Quere whether mankind is best shaped by economic pressure. Is there no incentive capable of mobilizing its energies save the cruel economic lash, that less urges onward than drives to desperation and ignoble evasion—a slavery masquerading as freedom, a ghastly mockery of independence?

No land as beautiful as the one we dream in default of it.

To the muteness of the plastic arts is due their eloquence.

The power of illusion is that it expresses a truth in ourselves.

THE BOY'S RETURN.

There'll be laughter in the house, very soon.
There'll be drumming to some record's jazzy tune.
There'll be shouting, "Where's the cake?
Where's the pie you said you'd make?"
For the boy is coming home the end of June.

There'll be wise cracks at the table when we eat.
There'll be jokes about the dad who carves the meat
And beyond the slightest doubt
There'll be gravy spilled about
At the spot where we have kept his vacant seat.

Soon we'll see a coat and hat thrown on a chair,
On his bedroom floor we'll find his underwear.
There'll be calls upon the phone which the months we haven't known
And some soft, sweet voices asking if he's there.

There'll be foot prints on the carpet after rain,
But it's certain that his mother won't complain,
For we've missed him through the year,
Now a week will bring him here
And the house is going to seem like home again.

A Wise Man Is No Less Wise Because Many Foolish Groups Claim Him as a Leader.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

DURING Napoleon's conquest of Europe, according to an ancient story, a number of French peasant women one evening passed a stockade in which Prussian prisoners were confined.

One of the prisoners was on his knees, praying aloud in his native tongue.

The French women listened for a moment in bewildered silence and the laughed. "How absurd," said one of them, "to think that God can understand such talk."

Because they understood no language but French, it seemed unreasonable to them that any other language should be understood in Heaven.

Doubtless that seems ridiculous to you, but a narrowness similar to that of the French peasants has engendered hatreds since the dawn of history.

It has shed more blood and tortured more victims than any other folly of which man is guilty, and still in our "enlightened" age it makes brutes of the stupid and the ignorant.

"There is one God!" cry the nations in chorus, and having thus agreed they hate one another because they use different sounds to express the same thought.

If any man of sense should be cast away on an uninhabited island in the sea and there should find a castle and a garden, he would look around for the builder.

Failing to discover anybody, he would say to himself: "Someone has been here before me, for these things could not have happened of themselves."

Doubtless he would endeavor to picture his unknown benefactor; certainly, in so doing, he would imagine a man in all ways much like himself.

That is precisely what every race of man has done.

Each race in turn, primitive or cultured, finding itself surrounded by unmistakable evidence of a creator's marvelous intelligence and power, quite logically assumed the existence of a creator and endeavored to picture him.

Each race, being hindered by its own limitations, created its god in its own image—powerful and shrewd, cruel and savage, wise and compassionate—each race imagining in its god the qualities it found most admirable in itself.

But opinion does not change a fact, and a rose by any other name is yet a rose.

Yahweh or Jehovah, Allah or Wotan—use what name men will, the fact of God remains unchanged, and the master of the universe remains the master, however little men understand him.

Many races use many words to designate the sun, and each imagines the world in darkness beyond its small horizon, but the same sun shines for all and man's opinion does not affect it.

NURSERY RHYMES FOR THE LINDBERGH HEIR.

There was an old woman who lived in a shoe;
She bought her an engine and presently flew
To Egypt, to China and Greece on a dare—
And always refueled the old shoe in the air.

There was a man in our town and he was wondrous wise,
He hopped off on a table leaf and flew it through the skies;
And when he saw how high he was, with all his might and main
He did a lot of somersaults and flew it back again.

The king was at the flying field learning how to hop,
The queen was in a parachute learning how to drop;
The duke was in the treetop explaining to the duchess
That a landing of that nature means a month or two on crutches.

The cows are in the meadow, the sheep are in the corn;
"Get them away," the farmer appealed,

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

California's Climate a Drawback, Says Official, by Inviting Odious Comparisons in Automobile Accidents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The people of California pride themselves above all else upon their glorious climate. But now comes an official of the Golden State with a jeremiad built upon that wonderful climate. Eugene W. Biscailuz, superintendent of highway patrol of California, declares that "California suffers in comparison with other States with respect to her high automobile fatality statistics by reason that her climate is such as to encourage and promote year-round driving, while in other States cars are tied up by snow and inclement weather for periods ranging from three to six months every year."

Calling attention to the fact that the automobile now accounts for 32 per cent of all the accidental deaths in the United States, and that deaths from automobile accidents have increased three-fold in a decade, Mr. Biscailuz adds that modern automotive engineering has made the motor vehicle so safe that less than 1 per cent of accidents can be traced to mechanical defects. He is sure that an analysis of motor accidents and their causes will demonstrate the accuracy of his opinion that nearly all are preventable. He points out that of the 2,244 deaths in his State during the year, 757 were deaths of pedestrians, and declares that there is "scarcely any excuse for hitting a pedestrian."

In spite of the additional labor and worry for which the climate of California is responsible, the superintendent of the State patrol promises to keep up the schools where officers are trained in the best means of instructing motorists in safety methods, which he regards of far more importance in protecting life and property than the distribution of "tickets" for minor infractions of traffic rules. Motorists everywhere will commend this decision.

OVERLAND TRAVELER.

Gen. Coxey Originator of the Idea of Skillful Timing of Public Work to Offset Depression.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The presidential committee, including such "luminaries" as Owen D. Young, John J. Raskob, William Green and Daniel Willard, reports these conclusions:

"The skillful timing in the use of a comparatively small margin of public construction is more important. In this lies the real opportunity for practical influence upon the economic balance."

A Daniel come to judgment! I wonder if these "learned" gentlemen ever heard of the Coxey bill? Coxey had this identical principle embodied in a bill in Congress 30-odd years ago and resurrected it on March 21, 1928.

The Coxey bill gave the States, cities and communities the right to start needed public improvements by depositing non-interest bearing 25-year bonds with the Secretary of the Treasury as security for the issuance of legal tender money at cost of coinage and service, and then paying back 4 per cent of the principal annually until the bonds were canceled and the currency retired from circulation. The security was to be a first lien on the improved real estate of the State, city or community. This money would be expended on public buildings and other public works such as roads, market roads, &c., giving employment and increasing the purchasing power of the people until conditions became normal when, by power given the executive, the law would cease to operate.

I repeat with the committee: "The skillful timing in the use of a comparatively small margin of public construction is far more important."

This is a complete vindication of the principle of the Coxey bill and he deserves the credit.

W. J. DWYER.

The Prophet of Coeur d'Alene Foresees a Cromwell Shutting Up the Senate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two illuminating commentaries on the United States Senate appeared recently in the newspapers. One was a cartoon showing President Hoover, labeled "Executive Department," steering the ship of state, and the Senate and judicial departments trying to get hold of the wheel, the Senate exclaiming, "You're wrong again, Cap'n." The cartoon was captioned, "It Takes Three to Steer This Ship." The other commentary on the Senate was an item in a newspaper that stated that the United States Senate had to adjourn one afternoon recently since it could not get a quorum because a double-header was being played at the Washington Baseball Park.

For some time past voices have been raised in dissatisfaction with the Congress, and especially with the Senate. The senators lack vision, courage and wisdom, they have no clear understanding of the needs of America and its people, they neglect their duties and the business of the Nation, and they are more than suspected of favoring and helping the interests of the rich and the great and of neglecting and ignoring the interests of the poor and the lowly.

The time is coming when a man is going to stamp into the Senate chamber—as another man once stamped into Parliament—and cry in a rasping voice, "I will put a stop to your prating!" The time is coming when one man, and one man alone, will steer the ship of state.

FROG LEG SEASON HERE.

In parts of this glorious country of ours they have frog legs that really make you feel proud of the red, white and blue, says the New York World. In Charleston, W. Va., for example, it is rare to see a frog leg less than 6 inches long, and most of those served there are between 7 and 9 inches long, and about as thick as a perfecto cigar. Two of them, as a rule, make a portion, and two of them, believe it or not, are all you want to eat. And in Huntington, we have heard, they run still bigger. The waters of the Ohio River at that point act as a tonic on the frogs, causing them to grow to exceptional size, so that occasionally, it is said, one leg makes a portion. We can not vouch for that ourselves, but we can vouch for the Charleston frog legs.

Classic Work Of Comtesse Gains Praise

Sister of House Speaker Authority on Plays of Shakespeare.

DESPITE the heavy social duties of the Comtesse Clara Longworth de Chambrun, wife of the division general, she has found time to pursue her brilliant studies of Shakespeare, and has produced several works reaffirming her position as one of the most learned and acute interpreters of the great dramatist. The fact that she writes in French as well as in English has caused her ingenuous scholarship to be appreciated in France, where she holds the highly prized degree of LL.D. from the Sorbonne.

Not content with being one of the most gifted and persuasive Stratfordians, as those Shakespeareans are called who believe that the dramatist was himself and not some one else, the Comtesse has an artist's flare for the psychology and morals of present-day problems. One of her novels, "Playing with Souls," caught so well certain phases of the modern temperament that it has recently been done as a First National Picture. She has also produced several novels in French. Just now off the French press is "Deux Bagues au Doigt," which two years ago was published as "His Wife's Romance." There has also recently appeared an edition beautifully illustrated by Robert Genicot of an Arabian miracle tale of remarkable quality.

The Comtesse de Chambrun is the sister of the Speaker of the House, Mr. Nicholas Longworth, and is well known in Washington. Her husband, Comte Adalbert de Chambrun, after a varied career of exploration and soldiering, is now military governor of Fez. Recently during the Eucharistic Congress, held in Tunis on the site of ancient Carthage, the comtesse had as her guest her sister, Mrs. Buckner Wallingford, the former Miss Annie Rives Longworth. After an airplane trip to Sicily and Naples they have arrived in Paris and are taking part in the gaieties of the Grande Semaine.

The most glamorous event of this festival week was the annual garden party given by the Maharajah of Kapurthala, whose picturesque home near the Bois de Boulogne rivals in color the tulip fields of Holland or the bazaars of Cairo, Bagdad or Teheran.

Married Yesterday

MRS. PETER B. CHIPOURAS, who was Miss Pota Lynard until her marriage yesterday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Constantine B. Lynard.

Miss Lynard Is Married in Grecian Rites

Mr. and Mrs. Chipouras Leave Immediately on Trip to Canada.

In St. Sophia's Greek Orthodox Church, Miss Pota Lynard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Constantine Peter Lynard, was married last evening to Mr. Peter D. Chipouras, the ceremony being performed at 8 o'clock by the Rev. Vasilius Papanickas. Although the sonorous ritual of the Greek Church was used, the flower-decked church, the familiar wedding marches and the group of pretty maids attending the bride were all suggestive of the typical American wedding.

The bride is of Greek descent, although she was born in this country, and Mr. Chipouras is a native of Greece. A graduate of the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce of the University of Pennsylvania, he took his LL.B. degree at Georgetown University and is preparing for admission to the District bar.

Miss Lorraine Lynard, sister of the bride, was her matron of honor, and the two bridesmaids were Miss Demetra Chaconas and Miss Sophie Versis. They were gowned alike in chiffon frocks, the maid of honor wearing pale green, one of the bridesmaids pink and the other blue. The bride had chosen the white satin gown of tradition, worn with a tulle veil.

Mr. Peter Dracopoulos was best man, the ushers being Mr. Peter L. Dounis and Mr. Peter C. Dynard, brother of the bride.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Chipouras left for a wedding trip to Canada, whence they will return by way of the Hudson. They will make their home in Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Stotesbury, the stepfather and mother of Mrs. Atwill, will spend July and August at Bar Harbor, where they have one of the handsomest places there, called Wingwood House, and where they will entertain extensively.

The Roumanian Minister, Mr. Charles Davila, is passing some time in Southampton, Long Island, with Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Macy en route to his villa in Newport for the remainder of the summer. The Counselor of Legation, Mr. Frederic Nano, and the Attache of the Legation, Mr. George Ducs, are also with Mr. and Mrs. Macy.

Mrs. French Strother and her sister, Miss Clark Farley, have returned to their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel from New York, where they passed some time.

Mrs. Frederick C. Hicks, who is passing the summer at Sands Point, will entertain on Friday with a supper, followed by a display of fireworks, for the Junior Naval Division of Port Washington.

Mr. Loening Marries Girl Of New York

Miss Marka Truesdale's Wedding of Interest to Capital.

Miss Marka Truesdale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Truesdale, of New York and Westbury, Long Island, was married Saturday afternoon to Mr. Grover Cleveland Loening, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Loening, in the Church of the Advent, Westbury. The Rev. Dr. Savage, assistant rector of the church, officiated in the absence of Archdeacon Scott, of Quebec, a cousin of the bride, who was to have performed the ceremony, but was unable to be present.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her mother's white satin wedding gown of empire style, and her great-grandmother's lace veil over a full tulle veil. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Barbara Truesdale, sister of the bride. She wore a yellow organdie dress with long skirt, a large green leghorn hat trimmed with yellow streamers, and carried garden flowers. The bridesmaids' costumes were of green organdie. They wore large yellow leghorn hats trimmed with green streamers and carried varicolored flowers.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Laura Holmes, Nancy Beckscher, Lucy Tew, Nora Grace, Evelyn Talbot, Mary Elizabeth Putnam, Mary Paschal Davis, Mary T. Crier and the younger sisters of the bride, Lucy and Anne Truesdale.

The flower girl was Frances Garvan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Garvan. She wore a green organdie frock, with hat to match, and carried a basket of garden flowers.

Mr. Rudolph R. Loening was his brother's best man. Ushers were F. Trubee Davison, the Assistant Secretary of War for Aviation; Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, Albert P. Loening, Richard Hoyt, Capt. John H. Towers, U. S. N., of Washington; J. Dinsmore Tew 2d, B. Allison Gillies, F. Scott Truesdale, brother of the bride; William Royle, Charles Baskerville, William H. Labrot and Paul Mellon, son of the Secretary of the Treasury.

The ceremony was followed by a reception on the lawn at the Truesdale home, Road Edge, Westbury. Mr. and Mrs. Truesdale received with the bridal couple and the members of the wedding party.

After their wedding trip the couple will live at Glen Head, Long Island.

The bride attended Miss Chapin's School and was introduced to society in the season of 1928. She has taken an active interest in the activities of the Junior League, notably the Junior League Theater School and for a year the Junior League Business Opportunities Bureau, of which she has been manager.

Mr. Loening was born in the American Consulate in Bremen, Germany, while his father, the late Albert Loening, was consul there in the administration of President Cleveland, for whom Mr. Loening was named. He attended the Cutler School in New York and the Lawrenceville School, near Princeton, N. J., and was graduated from Columbia in 1911. With his brother he founded the Loening Aeronautical Engineering Corporation and is president and founder of the Grover Loening Aircraft Co., and a director of the Pan-American Airways, Inc., Aviation Corporation of the Americas, W. A. Harriman Securities Corporation, Palmer Securities Corporation and the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

Mrs. William E. Pulliam, wife of the Receiver General of Santo Domingo, who just arrived from the West Indies, is a house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Welles, Oxon Hill Manor, Md., for a short stay prior to leaving for her home in California for the summer.

Touches on Czarist Debts, Propaganda and Races in Soviet State.

BARES TRADE UP-GRADE

Moscow, June 29 (A.P.).—Joseph Stalin's record-breaking seven-hour speech before the Communist Party Congress, occupying 37 solid columns of newspaper print today, has made him more than ever the strongest political figure in Soviet Russia.

The speech, as printed, touched upon three questions of vital international interest and importance which previous summaries had failed to reveal. These are czarist debts, Bolshevist propaganda abroad and the Soviet policy respecting minority races within the union. Concerning the czarist debts, Stalin, who never before spoke publicly on this question, declared the Soviet government is ready to pay part of these debts, if the powers holding such claims are willing to advance credits to the Bolshevists, the government regarding such part payments of czarist obligations as extra interest upon such credits.

Stalin doubtless had in mind the claims of foreign corporations for property confiscated during the revolution rather than the claims of foreign governments for unpaid loans.

To Continue Tactics.

Russia's "Iron Man" also made a notable utterance respecting Bolshevist propaganda, which is being considered abroad as a barrier against the establishment of normal relations between Soviet Russia and "capitalistic countries," like the United States.

He made it clear that however much the United States and other countries dislike the Soviet system of agricultural collectivization, extermination of Kulaks, antireligious propaganda and the battle against counter-revolutionists, the Bolsheviks would continue their activities unabated in these directions, because they represent the unalienable right of the Russian workers and peasants as embodied in the Soviet constitution.

Touching upon the question of Soviet Russia's many minority racial elements, Stalin revealed to the lay reader for the first time the existence within and without the Communist party of a tendency on the part of certain groups to abolish autonomous and federated national republics and absorb them all into one great single unified Russian state with the Russian tongue as the sole language.

Hits Rigid Centralization.

All such inclinations, Stalin declared, must be crushed, as they constitute a dangerous form of "greater Russian Chauvinism." Every one of the many minority races within the Soviet Union, he emphasized, must continue to enjoy the privilege of having its own distinctive language, culture, courts, schools, customs and individual mode of life.

Subscribing to Lenin's dictum on the same subjects, Stalin said that national and state differences between peoples and countries will remain for a long period even after the establishment of a dictatorship of the proletariat on a world scale.

"We have established complete unity of the social, economic and political interests of the peoples of the entire Soviet Union," he continued. "But this does not mean we intend to deprive these minority races of their national independence and place them under the aegis of 'great Russia' as described by Chauvinistic elements."

Dealing with the Soviets' economic and agricultural achievements during the last two years he cited figures, which, if taken litterally may give other countries cause for thought. For example, the fact that in heavy and light industries Soviet Russia this year will have at least an 80 per cent increase over the prewar production.

In comparison with 1927, he declared, Soviet Russia's international trade turnover doubled. The entire state budget of the union also doubled since 1927. In 1927 the entire national income amounted to 23,000,000,000 rubles, whereas this year it will reach 34,000,000,000 rubles (about $17,000,000,000). The Soviet oil production this year, he added, will yield 809,000,000 rubles (about $404,500,000), which constitutes 83 per cent of the total quantity of oil production contemplated by the end of the five-year plan.

Missionary Plane Blessed; Starts Alaska Flight Today

G. J. Feltes, Lay Brother of Jesuit Order, to Pilot Machine.

New York, June 29 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The Marquette Missionary, a Bellanca pacemaker, with a mission unusual in aviation annals, was blessed today at Rossevelt Field, Mineola, Long Island, preparatory to its taking off tomorrow on a 3,040-mile flight to Alaska, piloted by Brother G. T. Feltes, of the Jesuit Order, who will go to the Northland to aid Bishop Criment in religious work there.

Brother Feltes, known as the first flying missionary of his order, will be accompanied by George Peckenpack as copilot when the Deisel-motored plane starts on its first 400-mile lap from here to Buffalo.

The plane was presented to the flying missionary by the Marquette League, of which Judge A. J. Tally is president and the Rev. William Flynn is secretary general. The craft is expected to expedite the travel in the Eskimo regions where missions have been established.

The route of the plane will take it from Buffalo to Detroit, via Canada; from Detroit via Chicago to Dubuque, Iowa; from Dubuque to Des Moines to Wichita to Phoenix, Ariz., to Los Angeles to San Francisco, reaching there Saturday. It will be flown to Seattle, and then crated aboard a steamer to Alaska. Its base will be at Holy Cross Mission, 400 miles up the Yukon.

BROTHER G. J. FELTES, S. J.

Brother Feltes is 32 and has been in the Jesuit Order for 15 years. He is the only one of his order with a pilot's license, having flown about 100 hours, in most every type of plane, and with some of the best known pilots in the country.

Charleroi, Pa., June 29 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A set of false teeth fastened in a broken windshield was the only evidence police had today of an auto accident which is said to have occurred near Stockdale.

The wrecked auto, its window broken and the front damaged, was found in a field along the side of the road late yesterday. The teeth were undamaged and are pronounced by a local dentist to be an expensive set.

INDIA UNREST BLOW TO AMERICAN TRADE

Bombay Journal Says Crash Looms if Business Drop Continues.

AUTO INDUSTRY SUFFERS

Bombay, June 29 (A.P.).—American trade with India has been hit by the business slump brought about by the swara, or independence movement, and the subsequent boycott. The chief sufferers have been the automobile industry and shippers of various kinds of machinery.

The Nationalists' boycott is directed against British goods in particular, but all foreign firms doing business in different parts of the country are feeling its effects. Enormous losses have resulted. Japan's trade in cotton goods also was hard hit by Mahatma Gandhi's campaign to stimulate homespuns, but also by the 5 per cent Indian preferential tariff which importing agents say works in Great Britain's favor. Business men believe that in a short time the automobile, as well as the cotton yarn and piece goods business, will be in the doldrums owing to Indian unrest and the feeling of uncertainty which prevails generally in commercial circles as well as among individuals.

During 1929 there were shipped from the United States and Canada 15,000 trucks and 12,000 private cars for the Indian trade. This average continued until last month, when business began its decline.

In May, 1929, 459 cars were sold in Bombay Presidency, while in May, 1930, but 284 cars were sold, and observers say indications point to June figures far below May's.

A detailed analysis of British India's trade returns for May, issued by the Department of Commercial Intelligence and Statistics, reflected the falling trade due to the political situation. It showed the visible balance of trade in May was but 9,300,000 rupees, or approximately $3,300,000, in favor of India, as against 36,600,000 rupees, or about $13,300,000 in April, and 24,600,000 rupees, or about $9,000,000 in India's favor in May of 1929.

The British-owned Bombay News says "If the trade decline continues, owing to the political situation, India is heading for a big economic crash."

Directs A&P's buying

If you hired a personal agent to buy food in the markets of the world for your own table, you would give him, first, money for the purchase and shipping costs; second, money to cover his expenses; and, third, a salary for his services . . . You, yourself, would choose the kind of food he would buy.

That's just what you do when you trade with A & P.

Of every dollar which you pay over A & P counters, 83½ cents go to food producing communities* in exchange for the food you ask for.

A & P's part is to find out what you want—by what you order in its stores—and to spend your 83½ cents as you direct. Of the rest of your dollar, 14 cents stay in your neighborhood to run A & P stores.

All you pay A & P for its services is the remaining 2½ cents.

BY JULIE ANNE MOORE

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS.

Janet Decker, 18, with closely cropped head of burnt gold and a pair of very large and quizzical eyes. The flying secretary for

Richard C. Tolbert, president of the Great Eastern Air Transportation Co., and father of Dick Tolbert, a young man, who is an officer for Great Eastern, and who has told Janet he loves her and intends to marry her even though he is at present engaged to Helen Morgan, a society girl, who has just sailed for Europe.

Hugh Temple, an official and pilot for Great Eastern and the man who hired Janet. He is strangely missing along with a large shipment of money, which he was transporting by plane to a New York bank. Janet doesn't believe he is guilty, although the detectives and the Tolberts agree that evidence points to Temple.

Henry Frenda, a clerk in the office of Great Eastern, and a friend of Janet's.

Fred Turner, an automobile mechanic, who was soft on Janet and offered her an engagement ring, but which Janet declined, wanting time to think.

Belter, office manager for Great Eastern and Henry's boss.

Miss Sears, Dick Tolbert's secretary.

Janet has just returned from an adventuresome trip to New York and is waiting for Fred to call at her house when a boy delivers a note: "Meet me where the grand stand stood in old Brassco Park at 11 o'clock Wednesday night. Do not be afraid and do not tell any one you are coming. Trust me." It is unsigned. Fred arrives and Janet asks him if he knows where she can borrow a revolver, but she does not tell him the contents of the note.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XVI.

"A revolver?" Fred repeated, puzzled. "What do you want a revolver for, Jan?"

Without a moment's hesitation, Janet replied: "I think it's a part of every girl's education to learn how to use firearms. Men know how, so why shouldn't women? * * * Come on over and let's talk, Fred. It's late already and we've got a lot on our chests."

"The weather signals don't look so hot for me," Fred said, grimly, following her to the couch and slumping down beside her. "Maybe I ought not remind you that you haven't let me kiss you since I came in * * *"

Impulsively, Janet leaned over and put her lips to his, but when he would have caught her in his arms, she held him back. "That," she said a little sadly, "is for old time's sake, Fred. * * * You're a darling, and I think I'll always want to kiss you, but——"

"But the answer I've been waiting for is 'No.' That it?"

"Let's pretend you haven't been waiting for an answer, Fred. We mustn't spoil a friendship that has meant so much to—to me, at least * * * Just a little while ago I was the Janet of a small, simple, wholesome world. But I'm not the same girl now, Fred. I'm some one else, and the world I've been thrown into since I took the new job has changed everything * * * everything, Fred."

"Meaning," said Fred, "you've fallen for some other fellow?"

"Meaning," Janet replied evasively, "that the girl you were in love with doesn't exist any more. I mean that * * * I don't know how it all happened so quickly, but in one short week I've been pulled into a strange current, and there's nothing I can do about it but let it take me where it will. Does that sound silly to you, Fred?"

"It doesn't sound very sensible," Fred admitted. "No matter how you're fixed, you're still living your own life, aren't you?"

"No, I'm not, Fred. When I took the job with Mr. Tolbert, I might just as well have gone off on another planet. In the first place, I walked into trouble * * * not my trouble, understand, but trouble I had to take an interest in. I've seen everything but murder this week, Fred, and I wouldn't be surprised if I saw that before it's over."

Fred said quietly: "And you don't think you'll ever want to come back to the old world, Jan? * * * Maybe you'll get tired of the other thing and get out of it."

"To tell you the truth, Fred," Janet said after a moment, "I think I'd like to get out of it right now. But I can't. That's the point I'm trying to get over to you. I can't get out of it! I've got to see it through; and every day it's changing me. Don't you see what I'm getting at?"

"'Fraid I can't," Fred said, sulkily. "The only thing I see is that I'm out of the picture. But I had a feeling that was coming. Remember the day we were talking up in the employment bureau and you were giving me a Sunday school talk on looking out for opportunity? I had a hunch then that before long I'd be out in the cold. * * * I haven't forgotten what you said you wanted * * * lots of money, nice clothes, high society and a 'handsome, distinguished husband.' Remember that?"

Janet felt very small and despicable. She wanted Fred to understand, and she tried very hard to make him see the truth without hurting him. But long after Fred had gone she abused herself for having made him unhappy. He was a brick, and the girl who got him for a husband would be in luck, but what could she do?

Dick called next morning before Janet was up and left word that Tolbert was suffering with a cold and that there would be no need for her to come to the field. Margaret, who answered the telephone, repeated the message to her mother, who promptly tiptoed into Janet's room, lowered the shades, brought out the alarm clock and closed the door quietly behind her.

"Now don't go storming through the house when you leave for school," she warned Margaret. "The poor child's sick for need of sleep and she might as well get enough of it for once."

But shortly before 10 the telephone rang and when Mrs. Decker hurried in from the kitchen to answer it, she found Janet peering out of her door, obviously alarmed. "Where's the clock, Mud?" she demanded. "Somebody pulled my shades down and I overslept. Is it 8 o'clock yet?"

Mrs. Decker told her of Dick's call. "Wait a minute," she said, "until I answer the phone, though it's probably Fred Turner asking for you."

"It's young Mr. Tolbert again," she said a moment later, "he wants to talk to you, honey."

"Morning, Blue-Eyes," Dick greeted her. "Get enough sleep?"

"Just rolled out," Janet told him. "What's the idea of saying you haven't any use for me around that place?"

"Dad's under the weather and I thought you needed the rest. Love me this morning?"

"Hmm! Where're you calling from?"

"Pay station," he told her, laughing. "No one's listening in."

"I know most of the operators."

"Sorry, but it doesn't matter. I'd broadcast that question from any radio station. Do I get an answer?"

"Of course, I love you, Dick. You don't have to ask that. * * * Hear anything exciting since last night?"

"Entirely too much. * * *"

"About Hugh?"

"No, Helen."

"Helen? I hope you didn't carry out your threat about the cable * * *?"

"No, ma'm. She cabled me this morning. Her mother isn't well and they're sailing for the States. Almost from one boat to the other. Can you beat it?"

"Hmm," said Janet, for lack of something better to say.

"I was wondering," said Dick, "if I could call tonight—say about eight, or a little after——?"

"There'll be heaps of trouble if you don't," Janet declared. "Why not come to supper?"

Dick dropped his voice slightly. "Sorry, darling, but I'm to have lunch with Belter downtown. He came in this morning and whispered the invitation—very mysterious. I almost laughed in his face."

"Whispered the invitation?" Janet asked, perplexed. "What's the idea—afraid to let the office know he takes the boss out to dinner?"

Dick laughed. "I'm sure I don't know. Outside of Miss Sears, who was in her cubbyhole, there wasn't any one to listen in if he had broadcast with a magaphone. Funny fellow, Belter. At all odds, I'll come direct from the Elton to you, my beautiful."

"I'm a little jealous of Mr. Belter," Janet teased, "but business before whoopee. I'll be dolled up and waiting long before eight."

After her midmorning breakfast Janet called Cooney's laundry and informed the excited Bernice that they would lunch together where they could get in most easily. Then she took an apple and a magazine and lay in a tub of warm water until her mother had to pound on the door and tell her it was after eleven.

Bernice was waiting in front of the laundry on Grand street with open arms. "Late as usual, you darling," she cried. "Howland-Hughes is nearest. O. K.?"

"Perfect," Janet agreed. "Have you missed me?"

"Missed you, Jan? This town has been like a cemetery ever since you pulled out. Do you realize it's been years and years since I saw you?"

They found an unoccupied table in the department store restaurant and gave their orders.

Bernice had so many questions that she allowed very little time for replies. "Have you been up in the air yet, Jan? I'll bet you were scared to death, weren't you? How'd this Temple bird turn out? Nice as he sounded over the telephone that day? And how about the boss' son?"

"Wouldn't it be a good idea if you let me answer a question now and then?" Janet grinned. "Before I can think up an answer to one, you've asked another. Didn't Henry Frenda tell you I'd been flying between Mount Tobe and New York almost every day?"

"I haven't seen Henry," Bernice informed her, "but I've seen Fred, and that brings up another subject. What did you do to that boy?"

"What did I do to him? Why, nothing, as far as I know. When did you see him?"

"This morning, and Jan, he had a face on as long as your leg. I passed him on my way to work and tried to be pleasant. 'What do you hear from the flying stenog?' I asked pleasant like. 'Me?' he said. 'Why should I hear anything from her? She's too busy to think of a onery mechanic these days.' I knew right then something was up. You two had a racket, Jan?"

"Fred's a good sort, isn't he?" Janet said vaguely.

"That's not answering my question, but I'll let it go by . . . Fred is a good sort, Jan. He's a peach, and I don't think I'd need any pushing to go soft on him. If you ever give him the air for keeps, give me the high sign and I'll give him some obvious encouragement . . . But to get back to you and the new job . . ."

Janet answered Bernice's questions in so far as she could without revealing anything she thought of as confidential. Unfortunately for Bernice, practically everything interesting came under the last head and Bernice was left with a feeling that being flying secretary to the head of a big air transportation company wasn't much more exciting than working in a laundry.

"Seen anything of Miss Miller lately?" Janet inquired as they left the restaurant.

"Saw her day before yesterday," Bernice replied. "And not only saw her, but talked with her. She's got an idea you're coming back to your old job. Said she hadn't filled the place yet. She's been talking to your mother, Jan, and I think your mother's kind of kept things open, hoping you'd decide to go back."

They walked in silence for a space, gazing in the shop windows.

Janet said at last: "Do you know, Bernice, there isn't any going back in this life. You've got to keep moving, and if you care a hang where you end up, you've got to keep moving ahead."

"Good gosh!" exclaimed Bernice. "You sound like Prof. Devine giving an oration on progress, or something like that . . . Look who's here, Jan . . . Henry the Magnificent."

Henry, coming out of the Blue Bird, blocked their path. "The Sutherland sisters as I live," he said with an attempt at levity. "Haven't seen you two together since I don't know when." But a constant shifting of the eyes betrayed his real mood. Janet guessed that he was worried, and thought with a start of the money she owed him.

Her uneasiness was much increased a moment later when Henry said, "I'd like to see you some time tonight, if I can, Janet. Nothing important but——"

"Sorry, Henry," Janet told him, "but I've got a heavy program tonight."

Bernice said in a comical drawl: "Now you children don't mind me. I've got to grab off a little purchase at Grieve-Bissett's and hurry back to the laundry . . . Call me up, Jan, and we'll arrange a little party . . . So long . . ."

Henry wasted no time in broaching his subject. "I'm sorry to nag you about it, Janet," he began—and Janet wondered how she would meet this unexpected demand for money she didn't have—"But I've got to mention that book again. You know, the one on aviation?"

Janet breathed easily. Then she recalled that it had been but the day before that Henry had first asked her to bring the book to the office, and she hadn't been to the office since. Why all the feverish interest in the book, she wondered.

"If I'd known it was so awfully important," she said to Henry, "I'd have mailed it out to you last night. Do you want to come on home with me now?"

Henry said hurriedly: "I can't now, Janet. I've got to get back to the field. Belter's on my trail good and hot."

"For what, Henry?"

Henry glanced around nervously. "I'll tell you, Janet, but don't say anything about it. It's about that book . . . I lied to you that night. It wasn't my book. Belter gave it to me to give to Mr. Crell—the boarder at our house, you know. I didn't think it was important, Janet, and—well, you talked like you wanted it and——"

"Listen, Henry," said Janet, coming to his rescue; "you've been too nice to me for me to criticize you. If you lied about it then, at least you've told the truth about it now . . . and I'll see that you get the book. . . . Was Mr. Belter very mad about it?"

"Was he? . . . Good gosh, you'd have thought it was a million dollars instead of a measley book. He got me out of bed about it the first night, and this morning when I got in without it, he called me off and said he'd break my damn head if I didn't get it and get it in a hurry." Henry's thin chin suddenly stuck out and his eyes narrowed. "But I'll tell you one thing, Janet . . . If Belter ever takes a swing at me about that book, or anything else, I'll——"

"Don't threaten," said Janet, grinning. "You've got a good job and can't afford to lose it. Don't worry any more about it now, Henry. I'll bring the darned old book in tomorrow morning, and that'll be the end of it. . . . Get going now; it's late, and after all Belter's your boss; you don't want to get him down on you."

"All the same——" Henry began, petulantly.

"All the same you'll do what I say," Janet replied, giving him a friendly shove. "Good-by, and trust me to bring the book."

* * * *

Back at home Janet went directly to her room and stood with poised finger before the little shelf of books between her bed and the window. Then she began to take the books out, one by one. Finally, when the shelf was empty, she stood up and stared curiously at the pile of books at her feet. "I'm positive it was there before I went off the last time," she said aloud. Then she thought: "I had it in the living room . . . I was turning the pages to see what it was all about and I found all that senseless writing Henry had put in the back and——" She raised her head abruptly, her expression suggesting the birth of an interesting idea. "Say!" she thought; "Henry didn't write that stuff. He hadn't had the book, except to put it in the car when Belter gave it to him. Belter wrote it. I'll bet my last dollar on that. . . . And he sent it to the boarder at Henry's house. I wonder——"

She ran from her room and turned toward the kitchen. "Mud! Oh, Mud!" Steps sounded in the hall upstairs and Janet fairly flew up the stairs, two at a time. Mrs. Decker, arranging a cover on the hall table, looked up, a little startled.

"Mud, I left a book on aviation in my room the last time I was here, and now I can't find it," Janet told her breathlessly. "Have you seen anything of it?"

"Good heavens" Mrs. Decker exclaimed irrelevantly; "you're all excited. . . . Now wait a minute. . . . a book on aviation?" She assumed an attitude of deep thought, meanwhile holding up a protesting hand to quiet her overanxious daughter. "The only book on aviation that's been in the house was a green book with a pair of wings printed in gold on the back and——"

"That's the one!" Janet said nervously. "That's it, Mud. The one Henry Frenda gave me that night I went to ride with him and I——"

". . . and, Mrs. Decker resumed, ignoring the interruption, "I saw it lying on top of the other books on the shelf by your bed yesterday afternoon before you came home."

"But it isn't there!" Janet cried, now thoroughly agitated. "I've cleaned off the shelf and it isn't there. I'm positive!"

"Nobody's been in your room but me, honey," Mrs. Decker replied quietly. "It must be there."

Two thoughts, until now wholly unrelated, came together in Janet's brain then with a sharp click. The book wasn't there, and for the first time she saw it as a potentially highly important piece of evidence in a matter of life and death.

NO BUSINESS depression is indicated in the vicinity of the new RCA-Victor factory at Camden, N. J. Approximately 7,000 new employes will have been taken on by July 1, according to officials of the company there.

By August 1, 20,000 employes will be needed to produce 9,000 complete sets daily, when a new high peak in production is expected to be reached.

The indigestion rate is liable to take a jump if the chains add any more dinner hour features. One being put on tonight, "The Couple Next Door" (WMAL, 5:45 o'clock) has to do with a newly married pair and their colored maid.

Which brings to mind the remark of a visiting Englishman:

"You know," he said, "those Negro comedians who sell the toothwash—Angus and Andrew—I find quite amusing."

CERTAIN educators, who have apparently been more or less highhatting radio may profit by the suggestions made to an educational group by John Elwood, vice president of the National Broadcasting Co.

"Education and radio have many ideals in common," Mr. Elwood said, "but each has a technique of its own so different from the other, that, if they are combined wisely, forcibly and harmoniously, the mind of the showman and the mind of the educator must cooperate in the problem.

"When education joins hands with radio it enters the show business. We have to cover our pills of education with chocolate or licorice or peppermint if we are going to reach the people to whom the information is going to be most welcome.

"Education by radio, therefore, must carry the sugar-coating of entertainment in so far as it is humanly possible to do so."

The New York Fire Department radio service now being installed will direct fire boats while fighting fires and recall them in case of false alarm.

Vaughn de Leath is making personal appearances in Paris.

Passing up the announcing business, Marthin Provensen has gone in for a musical career. He is the older brother of Herluf Provensen, who is giving such a good account of himself as an announcer at WRC.

An orphan since childhood, Paul Oliver, tenor, is unmarried.

THIS letter has been received from James P. McGrath, manager of Station WJSV, in Alexandria.

"In furtherance of our policy of cooperation with the press, may I call your attention to the following notice read from the station last night at 11:05 p. m.

"'Ladies and gentlemen: It is our wish at this time to make the following announcement. Due to unfortunate circumstances, over which this station has no control, we are forced to withdraw our proposed presentation of Kay Keyser, the man from the South and his Band Southern. The music of Mr. Keyser and his orchestra is the feature of the jubilee of the Old Dominion Boat Club being held in the Alexandria Armory tonight.

"'May we state that the various Washington and Alexandria newspapers listed the presentation correctly and we had expected, up to a late hour, to fulfill our entire scheduled program.'"

From Poughkeepsie Courier:

"How does one cook by radio?"

Dare Interprets the MODE

A yellow and brown fantasy wool ensemble, with incrustations edged in brown and a beaver scarf-collar on the cape. (Courtesy of Phillippe et Gaston, Paris.)

Paris, June 29.

THE softening touch of fur at Miladi's neck can never be anything but lovely. And no other complementary note to a costume can quite take its place.

Supple furs are being arranged with great care and details and accomplish some of the intricate things that once were left to silks and fine materials. For instance, fur vestees in a tailleur, worn inside the jacket being flat enough not to bulge, are richly smart. Odd collar effects in an infinite variety, some like capes, some like narrow scarfs and tied in nonchalant charm, for all the world like a piece of crepe. Some of these collars are detachable, others are sewn right into the frock as a yoke.

Perhaps you're wondering why I mention the subject of furs at all, right in the dead of summer. There are, however, the cool evenings at the shore, there are the intermittent gusts of winds that come to freshen a sultry day, and there are the days ahead that are known as autumn. With these latter days in mind, the furriers are busy as bees this very minute getting ready to let you have the choicest skins during July and August.

* * * *

For Him.

More about summer resort wear! A man may wear a light gray or beige overcoat, with velvet collar, over his dinner jacket. And he needn't hesitate to be seen in a straw or panama hat. It's being done this season!

* * * *

Just—smart that's what it was! It was quiet, practical—practical as only chic can be practical, which is not being out loud about it. But then, Philippe et Gaston have a way of striking just that note in their models, so that's why I sketch so many of them for you. The dress, a fancy woolen weave, had a plain white collar and silver buckle trimming—in the hands of a less skilled designer I shudder at the thought of what might have evolved—but in the hands of this couturier what did evolve was the last word. And a little cape with a scarf collar of beaver makes it practical for street wear.

* * * *

The thing to be is not dumb! In lingerie language that means finding just the right brassiere to promote natural contour of your figure and its most feminine beauty. So if you're wise you'll send a stamped self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for her leaflet about tulle and ribbon and crocheted brassieres, and one for evening wear, with attached garters. Then you'll surprise yourself by actually making this "best-of-all brassiere," and seeing how much lovelier you look in your new frocks.

* * * *

The vogue of black and white will be carried into the late summer mode in crepe de chine and cotton materials cleverly printed in the two colors (or shouldn't I say "colors," black being no color at all and white being all the colors?)

By all means look for Dare's weekly fashion letter in each Sunday's Washington Post.

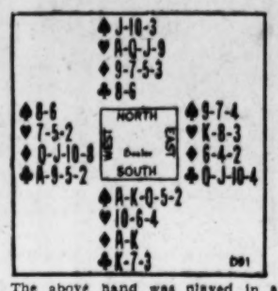
Au revoir!

Church Carnival Goes On.

A carnival held last week at St. Augustine's Catholic Church on Fifteenth street, between R and S streets northwest, will be continued for four nights this week, beginning tonight.

WORK ON BRIDGE

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.



The above hand was played in a game of Contract Bridge. South bid two Spades which North jumped to three, and South having a trick and a King more than the minimum required for a two-bid, went to four.

Had the hand been played at Auction, South would have bid one, which declaration would have been followed by three passes.

In the play West started by leading the Queen of Diamonds. South won with the King and the Declarer took out three rounds of trumps, exhausting partner and adversaries. He then led South's Ten of Hearts and, when West played small, played the Nine from dummy so that if the finesse should succeed, he would be able to repeat it immediately. The finesse, however, did not succeed. East won with the King of Hearts, and knowing from his partner's lead of the Queen of Diamonds that South had the Ace, determined that the best chance of saving the game lay in leading the Queen of Clubs. South covered with the King; West won with the Ace and continued the suit. That gave the adversaries three Clubs tricks in addition to the one Heart, so they saved the game.

The Correct Play.

Before exhausting dummy's trumps the Declarer should have appreciated the possibility of exactly what happened. As there were only two Clubs in the dummy, he could have avoided the danger by leading a Heart to trick 2 and handling the suit as is above described; or he could have led two rounds of trumps winning the first in dummy, the second in closed hand, and then a Heart.

The chances are that it would not matter which plan he adopted; the important point of the hand is that the Jack or Ten of trumps be left in the dummy, to prevent the running of more than two adverse Clubs, until after the Heart finesse has been taken. All that the Declarer can lose (barring some unexpected ruff) is one Heart and two Clubs, unless the trumps are all drawn before the Heart finesse; if that happen, the Declarer's chances depend upon the location of the adverse King of Hearts and Ace of Clubs.

SCORCH.

(Division of Textiles and Clothing.)

Scorch on cotton and line sometimes can be removed if the fibers are not actually burned. Wool and silk usually can not be restored after being scorched, but wool may be improved by brushing with emery paper.

For removing slight scorch stains from cotton or linen use one of the following:

Soap and water. If the fabric is washable, soap and water are sufficient to remove very slight stains.

Water and sunlight. Wet the spot with water, or soap and water, and expose to the sun for a day, or longer if necessary. The scorch disappears more rapidly if the material is moistened first.

Hydrogen peroxide.—Light scorch stains can be removed from any white fabric as follows: Dampen a white cotton cloth with hydrogen peroxide and place over the stain. Place a clean cloth over this to protect the iron and then iron with a medium warm iron, replacing the top cloth if the hydrogen peroxide soaks through. Repeat the operation if necessary. Precaution: Do not iron directly on the cloth with the peroxide or on the moist fabric after the dry cloth has been removed. If this is done, the iron leaves rust stains on the garment.

What Today Means to You

"CANCER."

IF JUNE 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:40 a. m., 2:30 p. m. to 4 p. m., and 11 p. m. to midnight. The danger periods are from 11 a. m. to noon, and 7 p. m. to 8:40 p. m.

Weird experiences are forecast for this date, harmless and interesting. Relief in sight for worries of long standing, and family affairs will be of a most peaceful and happy nature. Receipt of unexpected money.

The child born on this June 30 will have a considerable amount of mental activity and manual dexterity, but there is apt to be a great deal of restlessness and overexertion. It will love variety and expression, but it will lack determination and tenacity of purpose.

You are one of Earth's good people. This does not mean, however, that you are sacharine sweet, or angelically pious. You are ultrahuman, a real red-blooded being. You have very clean, wholesome and sane ideas about life. There is nothing distorted, uncanny or queer about you. If you have a temperament, it is cleverly concealed and you are its boss. You take on many of the delightful attributes of the month in which you were born. Your disposition is sunny, fresh, sweet and warm. "You hear life murmur, and you see it glisten." You believe in the nature fairies, and the souls of flowers. You have a poet's imagination, and a musician's love for music.

You have an almost childish trust in humanity; you hang on to your illusions. You will be surrounded by good influences and will come in touch with harmonious vibrations almost all of your life. Your horoscope does not reveal that you will ever be the victim of unscrupulous people. Destiny, in this respect is your protector, for you are not a good judge of character. You do not take your work very seriously, but you have a knack of getting through things in rather haphazard manner. You are always able to lift yourself (spiritually) out of any environment, and to make the most tedious work seem attractive.

Successful people born June 30:

2—William A. Wheeler, Vice President under President Hayes.
3—William E. Marshall, painter and engraver.
4—Edward Burgess, yacht designer.
5—Walter Hampden, actor.
6—Thomas H. Norton, chemist.

Poles Ready to Use Grow Wild in Rockies

Laramie, Wyo., June 29 (A.P.).—Poles all ready to use are the lodge pine pole, probably the best known tree of the Rocky Mountains, Dr. Aven Nelson, of the University of Wyoming, reports to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"It often forms a pure, dense stand, so dense and uniform as to suggest a crop plant sown by the hand of man," he says. "In such cases they shoot up as poles entirely free from branches, except at the top where the small crop of leaves is fighting for sunlight."

Rose Bowl to Be Rebuilt.

Pasadena, June 29.—Without a single dissenting vote, the board of city directors, a majority of which had previously opposed the project, has instructed City Manager R. V. Orbison to arrange a transfer of $135,000 from the land purchase fund to finance the reconstruction of the Rose Bowl.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

ROCK GARDENING.

ROCK gardens, while very old in England, are rather new with us. In America we have had such vast areas to be planted that we have done our gardening in a larger, broader way. One well-known English horticulturist told me not long ago that "In America your gardening is extensive, in England it is intensive; due to lack of space, we must make every foot of ground produce.

During the last few years we have been gradually gaining a wider knowledge of horticulture. This increase in knowledge has no doubt been brought about by the establishment of garden clubs, the national flower show and a well-established garden literature. Today we know our trees, shrubs and plants in a more intimate way. We are no longer willing to plant a tree, sow some grass seed or set out a few red geraniums and call it a garden. We plan carefully and intelligently. We study the bit of ground at our disposal, we consider surroundings, exposure, climate, soil conditions and the amount of time we have to devote to gardening.

This increase in garden consciousness has caused us to realize the fact that there are various forms of rock gardens which may easily be constructed in the average garden with minimum effort and little cost.

A rock garden may solve the problem of the smallest city back yard, and it may be used to equally good advantage in the larger suburban garden. A hillside or slight rise lends itself to a special form of rock gardening that is very satisfying. Even a mere depression in an open lawn can be transformed into a rock garden with a pool.

Ruins of old barns or other buildings can, with intelligent care, be converted into picturesque rock gardens, where even the most delicate mountain plants will thrive.

About the borders of a wooded stretch or in front of tall-growing shrubbery, we can frequently create most beautiful effects.

One advantage about a rock garden is that it can be made a little at a time. In other words, you can make a small beginning and later, as you progress in the adventure, try planting some of the rare primroses, gentians and other lovely varieties.

In the beginning, it is well to plant a few low junipers of prostrate habit and one or two of the taller-growing kinds to lend contrast. Then some phlox subiata, aubretia deltoides, saponaria ocymoides, sedums and primulas and perhaps arenaria, dianthus arenarius, scilla and alyssum saxatile to give color to the garden.

The above combination will be sufficient for the first season. The second year you will no doubt want more of the varieties you already have and, of course, some of the kinds which you do not have.

THREE FORCES POINTING WAY TO RESUMPTION OF PROSPERITY

Hope Dawns on Horizon Of Business in World

Depression With Falling Prices May Be Lifted by Customs Unification, Pooling Gold and Concert of Central Banks.

By IRVING FISHER
Professor of Economics, Yale University.
Special to The Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., June 29.—In Great Britain unemployment has, according to estimates, increased to 1,800,000; depression in basic business goes deeper, with restriction of output in the iron trade. Hitherto prosperous France has reduced her production in key industries. Germany is trying to cut wages and prices simultaneously, in order not to increase living costs, and so that she may undersell other nations in foreign markets. In Italy iron and steel output is slowing down. The Swiss watchmaking industry dwindles. Swedish lumber interests suffer from decline in British consumption.

Unemployment grows in Czechoslovakia, with stagnant textile, machinery and coal industries. In Austria industrial depression hangs on. As in Europe, so in Argentina, Brazil, India and Australia. There is a world-wide depression with declining commodity prices, large stocks, unemployment, and reduced purchasing power.

All this is reflected in the low price of American wheat, in our reduced foreign trade, and in lessened ability of our own people to buy food, clothing and homes. It is a prime factor in the decrease by more than 20 per cent in the earnings of 300 American companies representing many lines of industry and trade, for the first quarter of 1930, as compared by the National City Bank with first-quarter earnings in 1929.

It accounts largely for the slow recovery from our business recession, which has roots in the same causes that have affected the world markets.

Have Vast Gold Supply.

During the past seven years the United States has enjoyed unexampled prosperity, as measured by the average increase in real income for the whole people. With our command over a large part of the world's gold supply we have had abundant credit potentialities which were used, under the leadership of the Federal Reserve System, to stabilize the general level of prices and allow for business expansion.

Not so with Europe. Until 1928, American investors lent liberally to European reconstruction, and debt payment due America by the allies did not press heavily on their nationals.

So long as Europe, Canada, and South America could borrow of the United States enough to meet their expanding needs, besides satisfying current payments on debt service, all apparently went well. It was hardly noted that the sudden increase in value of the dollar, by more than one-third during the deflation years 1920-21, increased the burden of European debt to us. Later this injustice was roughly rectified by the scaling down of allied indebtedness.

But the immense public and private loans still remaining and growing, in recent years, to above twenty-five billions of dollars, have been subject to appreciation in value of the dollar by nearly 13 per cent within the past twelve-month.

Money Values Unstable.

In addition, there was during 1928 and 1929 a tightening of credits all over the world, which was not mitigated until deflation had set in. Sir Josiah Stamp, during his recent visit to America, pointed out that money values had again become unstable, that the world's stock of gold and its distribution had become insufficient, and that this condition had been reflected in the world-wide weakness of commodity markets. The rise in purchasing power of the dollar had made it correspondingly more difficult for our foreign debtors to meet their annual interest charges.

Accompanying this restriction of world credits, and largely causing it, has been the growing mutual exclusiveness of national markets. Trade barriers have multiplied. The war had created eleven new States, besides other customs districts, each with its own monetary system and frontiers economically isolated. The prevailing trade war, accentuated by high industrial costs and restricted markets, has produced its inevitable consequences in denial of further credits and depressed price levels.

Besides, from almost all civilized nations has come formal protest against the new American tariff law, which sets up yet higher barriers against their trade with the United States. But in signing the tariff bill President Hoover has said that the complaints "can be remedied if justified by proper application to the Tariff Commission."

Three Hopeful Signs.

There are three hopeful signs of forces that may pave the way to resumption of world prosperity. The first is the movement, sponsored by Premier Briand of France, toward economic unification of Europe by the creation of a European customs union. This should work toward the ideal of interstate free trade such as is enjoyed by the 48 members of the American Union.

The second force is the creation of the Bank for International Settlements, which is already helping toward revival of international trade by commercializing part of the German indemnity. Ultimately, it is hoped, this world bank may offer the means of economizing the monetary gold of the nations in such manner as to permit ample credit accommodations for industrial growth in all countries.

Finally, the principal central banks, including our own Federal Reserve, have worked in unison, by open market operations in buying securities and reducing discount rates, to accommodate trade with money and cheap credits. These will be availed of as soon as there shall be felt an undersupply of goods sufficient to make expansion of production schedules and reemployment imperative. The time for this may not be far off.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—George R. Fink, president of the Michigan Steel Corporation, announced that the corporation has inaugurated a program of plant expansion that will increase production at its Ecorse, Mich., mill by 30 per cent and effect substantial savings in production costs. The expansion program is being financed in part by an issue of $1,000,000 of debentures, which is part of the $3,000,000 debentures authorized by the stockholders in 1928.

The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. has received from the Navy Department an order for propelling and condensing machinery for the new Washington Treaty cruisers amounting to approximately $1,500,000. An additional order also was placed by the Navy Department for equipment of the three vessels with the recently developed Westinghouse propeller-type blowers for furnishing air under pressure to the oil-burning firerooms.

Organization was announced of the S. P. A. Truck Corporation to manufacture and market Studebaker and Pierce-Arrow trucks, buses, funeral cars, ambulances and othef commercial vehicles. A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation, is president of the new company.

The National City Bank of New York, as fiscal agent, has notified holders of Kingdom of Norway 20-year 6 per cent external loan sinking fund gold bonds, due August 1, 1944, that $541,000 principal amount of the bonds has been selected for redemption at par August 1, 1930.

The capacity of the Guthrie, La., compressor station of the Memphis Natural Gas Co. is to be increased by approximately 20 per cent and contracts for the necessary work are now being let so that it will be completed in advance of the next heating season, D. C. Schaffer, general superintendent, announced.

Wealth and Money Discrepancy.

An attempt to equalize money and wealth by making the total amount of money in the world equivalent to the total amount of wealth in the world would prove absolutely futile. The moment we increased the amount of money, the money value of all other forms of wealth would rise, and there would, therefore, still be a discrepancy between the amount of money and the amount of wealth.

Humans Are All Slaves.

In a specific sense we are all slaves. Almost all workers in modern society are bound by contract to some extent and for some period of time, even though it be no more than an hour. To that extent they are not free.

STOCK PRICES DROP TO NEW 1930 LOWS

Heavy Liquidation Brings Common Share Almost to Panic Level.

TRADING VALUE SHRINKS

By HARLOW PETERS
(Irving Fisher Service).

In a week of further heavy liquidation, prices of common stocks on the New York Stock Exchange reached, on last Tuesday, the 1930 low. On this date the Irving Fisher all-industrial index (1926 equals 100) stood at 123.5, which was only 0.63 per cent above the November 13 panic low index of 122.7. In the latter sessions of the week gains were general, although slight, all along the line, with a good deal of short covering on Thursday. The gains were attacked again on Friday, but the better stocks held well.

Since the 1930 high of 164.3 on April 11 the stock price index has dropped 24 per cent, at an average weekly rate of 2.2 per cent. Of this drop the larger part occurred during the past month, culminating in last week's low spot. However, the decline last week of 4.1 per cent was smaller than that of the week before, which showed a break of 7.1 per cent.

In addition to the auto accessories, building materials, copper, household products, office equipment, stores, and rail groups that made record 1929-1930 lows during the week of June 20, the machinery, motors, and steels groups last week reached new lows.

The Curb Exchange had a similar record, with new lows in all industrials, foods, motors, oils, stores and miscellaneous groups.

Value of Tradings Again Shrinks.

A 21 per cent drop in value of turnover featured last week's tradings on the New York Stock Exchange. Three weeks ago values traded averaged over two and a quarter million dollars. Declines in price and volume since then had almost halved value traded by last Thursday. This was for all stocks. Trading values of common industrials were shrinking at almost an equal rate, being off 19 per cent last week from the week preceding.

Of the 20 individual groups, 16 were off in values traded. Reflecting definitely lower price levels as well as drying-up in trading were utilities, oils, radio and theater stocks, motors, foods, chemicals, coppers and mining stocks, and stores groups, each of which was off more than $2,000,000. A spurt in trading at lower prices was enough to increase the average value traded in the rails group to the levels last seen in early April. Tobaccos, electrical equipment, and farm machinery groups made slight gains.

Upturn in Paris Prices.

A rift in the clouds overhanging European securities markets found best reflection last week in a gain of 6.2 per cent in Paris quotations. For the time, at least, the situation seemed less grave, although record lows below 1929 bottoms were registered in London and Berlin. The rate of decline had slackened in both centers.

Price levels in London remain 13 per cent under the last December low. Those at Paris are off 11 per cent, as against 16 per cent the preceding week, and Berlin off 2 per cent as against 0.4 per cent the week before.

The index of 225 industrial common stocks shows what a substantially representative $100 worth of stocks in 1926 would now amount to if held unchanged since that year. This index is weighted by shares outstanding. The index of "50 most active," or market leaders, shows the result of reinvesting the $100 every week in the market favorites of that week. This index is weighted by shares traded, the list changing weekly. The last column of the table gives the average yield per cent on these weeks' 50 leaders at current prices.

Fall to Violate November Low.

Last week the investment grade of stocks retained a toehold above the bottom of the chasm where air pockets deposited them last fall. They kept the all-industrials from sinking to their low point of that time. On Tuesday last the low point of the investment grade was still over 10 per cent above the bottom of the 1929 pit. On the same day the speculative group was 3 per cent below its November low, and the following day semiinvestment stocks were in worse case, being 6.7 per cent below their own panic level.

But rallying tendencies aided all groups. Nevertheless, investment industrials closed off 3.8 per cent from the preceding week's close, semiinvestment off 4.4 per cent and speculative off nearly 5 per cent. Investment stocks were at the level of last November 18. Semiinvestment industrials hovered around the low of November, 1926, and the speculative grade made a record low, under any point reached during and since the base year of 1926. Since the spring high the average weekly rate of decline has been 1.9, 2.3 and 2.8 per cent, respectively, for the three groups.

Costs of Wealth.

Opposed to the benefits of wealth are its costs. The purpose of wealth is to benefit its owner; to cause to happen what he desires, and to prevent what he does not desire to happen. Often, however, wealth can work no benefit without entailing some other cost. For instance, to own a house is to bring cost of maintenance.

COMMODITY PRICES SHOW HOPEFUL SIGN

Decline Is Less Severe in America While Foreign Levels Are Up.

TURN SEEN IN GERMANY

The situation in the wholesale commodity markets took a more hopeful turn last week, although the commodity price level still headed downward. The index dropped by 0.58 per cent to a new low of 85.7 (1926 equals 100), but the rate of decline was less severe than had been the case in the preceding few weeks. The week before the rate of fall was 0.92 per cent. Another hopeful sign was that the individual items that rose in price increased from 18 per cent the preceding week to 24 per cent last week.

Since January 3 the all-commodity index level has receded from 93.0 to 85.7, a total decline of 7.8 per cent, and at an average weekly rate of 0.31 per cent. The rate of decline has been fastest during the past month.

Dollar Still Buys More.

The purchasing power of the dollar, which is the reciprocal of the commodity price level, is now 16.7 cents above the buying worth of the 1926 dollar.

Foreign Levels Turn Up.

What may prove to be a prelude to betterment in the commodity situation here was the turn upward of the commodity price levels in Germany and France last week. The index for Germany was up 0.43 per cent, while that for France showed an increase of 0.25 per cent. Besides the increases of the German and French levels, the index for England dropped only 0.26 per cent, which was a decided slowing of its decline. The preceding week found the English index off 1.64 per cent.

The turn in German commodity prices came after a sharp drop of 1.6 per cent the preceding week, and the gain was the largest made since the week ended April 4. The index for France rose after the preceding week's drop of 1.4 per cent, the first improvement since the week ended May 30.

The average rate of decline in commodity prices since January 3, in the United States has been 0.31 per cent, as compared with 0.44 per cent in England, 0.41 per cent in Italy, 0.31 per cent in Germany and 0.27 per cent in France.

How to Keep Well

ACIDS AND ALKALIES.

THE continuance of life is dependent on the maintenance of a very delicate balance between acids and alkalies in the blood. The slightly alkaline reaction can not be changed more than a point or two in either direction without stopping the action of cells which must function or life will cease. To maintain this balance, chemicals—some acid and some alkaline—are stored in such a way as to be immediately available for use by the blood. If the tendency is acidward, immediately the store of alkali is drawn on. If the trend is the other way, draft is made on the acid bin.

In what we call acidosis there is no acidity of the blood, but there is an unusual use of alkali to overcome the acid tendency. Likewise, in alkalosis there is no excess of blood alkalinity; there is merely an excessive withdrawal of acid. In the light of these facts we must recognize that there is never an acid condition of the blood nor an acidity of the system.

Furthermore, we can see that acidosis is an effect rather than a cause, or, to put it another way, there are several separate disorders in each of which there is an acid tendency which draws on the alkali reserve, a group of symptoms which goes by the name acidosis. Likewise, there is more than one way to induce alkalosis—more than one abnormality which causes the group of symptoms which goes by the name alkalosis.

We have not always recognized the difference between these different kinds of acidosis and alkalosis and, in consequence, we sometimes have failed in giving relief. For instance, when a child is vomiting freely and after a while develops a fever we are likely to say acidosis—and to give orange juice and water. Such cases are more frequently alkalosis than acidosis, and the remedy needed is salt or some other chloride or some acid.

Prolonged vomiting causes a large loss of acid gastric juice and chlorides and, in consequence, the stock of acids and chlorides is drawn low. On the other hand, when a child has a diarrhea without vomiting and fever rises and some delirium develops the probability is that the child has one kind of acidosis. Orange juice and alkalies are helpful.

In the pyelitis of children we not infrequently give alkalies until symptoms of alkaloids develop. When acidosis or alkalosis is suspected an effort should be made to find out which is present before starting remedies.

QUININE NOT SEDATIVE.

Miss E. L. writes: In two weeks I have to play difficult pieces on the piano before a large audience. Due to strenuous practice my nerves are somewhat run down. A friend of mine suggested that I take quinine every day for a week before the performance, and that would quiet my nerves.

REPLY.

Quinine is not a sedative. In fact, a common complaint among those who take quinine for malaria is that it upsets the nerves. But faith can make even quinine act as a sedative.

EXPOSE TO SUN AND AIR.

M. L. M. writes: Lately my brother returned from a tuberculosis sanitarium. I intend to take a trip this year and use his suitcase. I intend to air it out before using. Do you think it is all right for me to use it?

REPLY.

I think so.
Sun it as well as air it.

NEAR RIOT AT END AS BROWNS STOP NATS' STREAK, 6-3; ATHLETICS AND YANKEES TRIUMPH BY MARGINS OF 1 RUN

Police Needed As A's Beat Tigers, 6-5

Detroit Fans Ired by Decision at Plate; Homer by Foxx.

Reese's Circuit Clout With 3 on Defeats Indians, 7-6.

DETROIT, June 29 (A.P.).—The Philadelphia Athletics defeated Detroit, 6-5, in their one-day stand here. The game ended in a near riot with police reserves escorting Umpire William Guthrie from the field. The Tigers staged a rally in the ninth, which fell one run short of a tie.

Jimmy Shevlin, Detroit rookie, was the third out when he tried to score from first on Stone's single. It was a close decision and the crowd disagreed with Umpire Guthrie.

Jimmy Foxx hit a home run with none on in the sixth inning.

With today's victory, the Athletics picked up a full game on Washington, increasing their lead in first place to two games. They gained no ground on the Yankees, however, as the latter also turned in a triumph, beating the Indians.

Yankees Down Tribe, 7-6, Reese Hits Homer, 3 On

New York, June 29 (A.P.).—Jimmy Reese's home run with the bases full proved to be the winning blow in the Yankees' 7-to-6 victory over Cleveland in the final game of the series. The Yankees won the series, four games to 1.

Charley Ruffing, who relieved Ed Wells with the score tied, blanked the Indians for the last three frames and got credit for his sixth straight victory. He has not lost a game since coming from Boston. He also scored the winning run on Lazzeri's sacrifice fly.

Lou Gehrig found Ferrell for his twenty-first homer of the year in the fourth.

The Indians pounded Wells hard and could do nothing with Ruffing, while Ferrell's base on balls proved his undoing, though he allowed only eight hits.

Cubs in Front As Dodgers Bow, 5-1

Root Holds Brooklyn Sluggers in Check Before 47,000.

League's Record for Series Attendance Is Shattered.

CHICAGO, June 29 (A.P.).—The Cubs took undisputed possession of first place in the hot National League race today by defeating Brooklyn, 5 to 1. The victory was the third out of four in the series and gave the champions the lead by one full game.

Charlie Root pitched superbly after a shaky start to win the game today. He permitted but seven well-scattered blows, while the Cubs pounded Thurston and Moss for eleven.

Forty-seven thousand fans watched the game, bringing the total attendance of the four-game series to approximately 140,000, a new National League attendance record for a series.

Braves Twice Down Cincinnati, 4-3, 10-3

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 29 (A.P.).—The Boston Braves took both ends of a double-header from the Reds here today, winning the first game, 4 to 3, and the second, 10 to 3.

The Braves massed their attack in the first two innings of the first game to score all their runs off Red Lucas, who held them safely for the remainder of the game. In the second encounter, attacks on three Red hurlers netted the Braves four runs in the first off Jakie May, three off Benton in the seventh, and three off Campbell in the ninth.

Commanderie Wins Grand Prix de Paris

Longchamps, France, June 29 (A. P.).—The greatest crowd in the history of the classic saw Commanderie, E. Henrique's 3-year-old filly, easily win the sixty-third running of the Grand Prix de Paris today and enrich her owner by 1,070,000 francs, about $42,000.

Commanderie, daughter of Belfonds, out of Corset, beat the favorite, Count Derivaud's Chateau Bouscaut, by a length and a half over the 3,000 meters course (3,080 yards). Chateau Bouscaut finished only a short head in front of Godiche and Velou Creme, both owned by Baron Edouard de Rothschild, which ran a dead heat for third place.

Commanderie was the eighth filly in Longchamp racing history to win the Grand Prix. Although she won the French Oaks, known as the Prix de Diane, Commanderie was an outsider in the betting, experts believing she did not have the stamina for the long Grand Prix route. She paid 22 to 1 to win and 4 to 1 to place. Chateau Bouscaut paid 2 to 1 to place; Godiche paid 9 francs, 50 centimes for 5 to show, and Velou Creme, 12 francs 50 centimes to show.

BAY CIRCUIT GAME GOES 18 FRAMES

St. Georges 10-9 Winner Over Newark in Long Fray.

ST. GEORGES Del., June 29.—The longest game of the Chesapeake Bay season was fought to an eighteen-inning close here today between St. Georges and Newark, two of the three Delaware representatives in the loop, when the home club batted out a sensational 10-to-9 victory, with the McCarthy boys doing their stuff at bat for the winning outfit. The game was in doubt until the final inning.

Cecilton, Md., June 29.—Kennedyville continued its lagging pace in the race for Chesapeake Bay League honors when the local club scored a 7-to-3 win in the weekly series of games along the upper Elmarva Peninsula, with Frank Bristow pitching his usual heady game for the home club.

In the fifth Benson hit safely and scored on Curry's single, and in the succeeding inning the visitors uncorked several wild throws which, added to Cecilton's timely hitting, placed the result beyond doubt. The visitors did their heavy scoring in the third when Van Dyke, visiting pitcher, was safe on an error by Boulden and came home on Loller's triple, who in turn scored on Archibald's bunt to third.

Middletown Bows To Galena, 7 to 6.

Middletown, Del., June 29.—Middletown was forced to step lower in the Chesapeake Bay League by suffering its eighth defeat at the hands of Galena, which banged out a 7-to-6 victory after both teams had used a brace of hurlers. For the victors Clendaniel and Johnson brought home the bacon with the willow.

Rene Lacoste Takes Star Golfer for Bride

Paris, June 29 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A real romance of the world of sport will culminate tomorrow in the wedding here of two of the most famous figures at international championships, Mlle. Simone Thion de la Chaume, premier woman golfer of France, and Rene Lacoste, hero of a hundred international tennis battles and holder at various times of the American, British and French net titles.

It is a genuine love match. The couple's idyll has been known to their friends and comrades in sport for many years, but the marriage has been postponed several times.

Besides being the French golf champion, Mlle. de la Chaume is a first-class tennis player, while Lacoste is formidable on the links. It was as partners in both games that the couple first met on the Basque coast and straightway fell in love.

Bith are popular in French society as well as in the field of sport, and their marriage tomorrow at the church of Sainte Clothilde will be among the most fashionable events of the season.

TENNIS FOUND EXPENSIVE.

Dallas, June 29 (A.P.).—Seventy-seven dozen tennis balls, worth $693, were required to play the matches during the six-day Texas district tennis tournament at Dallas recently.

RISKO MEETS GRIFFITHS IN BOUT

Match Tops Week's Card; Corbett Faces Thompson.

NEW YORK, June 29 (A.P.).—Tough old Johnny Risko, a stumbling block for many a good heavyweight, will try to stop Tuffy Griffiths' march through the heavyweight division in this week's best offering for cauliflower followers.

Griffiths and Risko, who recently cuffed Paulino Uzcudun around for 10 rounds, meet in the feature battle of 10 rounds at the Chicago Stadium Wednesday night. Griffiths probably will be a slight favorite, but the men who have beaten Risko decisively can be counted on the fingers of one hand without any particular crowding. Paul Swiderski, Syracuse, N. Y., light-heavyweight, takes on K. O. Clemons, of Cleveland, in the 10-round semifinal.

Thompson Meets Corbett.

Sharing interest with this bout will be the 10-round nontitular engagement between Young Jack Thompson, welterweight champion, and Young Corbett, of Fresno, at San Francisco Friday. Young Stribling, Macon, Ga., heavyweight, meets the old trial horse, Bud Gorman, at the Newark Velodrome tomorrow night and Primo Carnera is slated for a 10-round match with Jack McAuliffe, of Detroit, at South Bend., Ind., Saturday.

Detroit's Tuesday night show is headed by a 10-rounder between Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Ind., featherweight, and Earl Mastro, of Chicago, while Kid Chocolate, Cuban Negro 126-pounder, takes on Dominick Petrone, of New York, in the headliner at Ebberts Field, Brooklyn, Wednesday night.

Baltimore Corkmen Beat Annapolis, 5 to 2

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., June 29.—A snappy-playing heads-up nine representing the Crown Cork & Seal Co., of Baltimore, this afternoon defeated the Annapolis Team, 5 to 2. Play was reeled off in less than two hours, as Lefty Barrett, of the visitors, managed to best two Annapolis hurlers through a home run in the first frame by Jim Kelly, manager of the visiting team.

Kelly, for a number of years a member of the Annapolis Team, came back today in the role of a pilot, and it was his drive over the right field barrier with Wuesner on base that really won the ball game. The two tallies his team scored later were insignificant. As the game turned out, the fine relief hurling of Albert Mauk was lost, as the Corkmen had attained a first-inning lead off Lefty Honk Holidayoke, which the local batters could not overcome. Hits were scarce throughout the afternoon, each side having to be content with five safeties.

17 Victories in Row For Easton's Team

Special to The Washington Post.

Easton, Md., June 29.—Easton won its seventeenth straight game by defeating Cambridge today before the biggest crowd that has witnessed a game at Federal Park this season by a score of 11 to 4. The visitors put up a good game up to the eighth inning, when the home team batted Robinson all over the field, scoring eight runs. Carter, for the home team, was in fine form, striking out fourteen men. Hurley, for Cambridge, made a home run with one on first, scoring two runs in third inning.

NIGHT BALL PLANNED IN WHEELING

First Game Booked With Charleroi on July 13.

Special to The Washington Post.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 29.—Night baseball in Wheeling is to be a reality. The field is to be equipped and the first game played here with the Charleroi Governors on the night of July 13. It was first planned to open the night baseball season here on July 7—the day of the second half season opening, but this was found inadvisable when engineers installing the illuminators agreed that it might not be possible to have the units ready for the night of the seventh. The Smokes are away from home following the seventh until the thirteenth.

The lighting system will be composed of 40 units, embodying 180,000 watts. The system will be identical with that used by Omaha, in the Western League—said to be the greatest lighting system in organized baseball at the present time.

System of Lights To Be Used.

The system will find a set of eight lights at the positions near third and first bases and a set of eight other lights just 100 feet removed from first and third bases in a straight line down the third and first base lines. There will be one unit on the right of the home plate, mounted on the top of plate and another on the left of the grand stand.

To care for the outfield, there will be two units, one stationed in left-center field and the other in right-center field. The units will be mounted on poles 70 feet high and capable, it is stated, of making the whole play field as light as in daytime. Present plans call for 4,500 watts to each unit. Wheeling, it is said, is the only city east of Evansville to install night baseball. President Charles Holloway, of the Wheeling Club, is investing something over $10,000 in this installation, but says that it will be a sound business proposition.

PADDOCK RETURNS TO SCHOOL.

Los Angeles, June 29 (A.P.).—Charles Paddock has returned to his alma mater, the University of Southern California, to study law. The former sprint champion received his B. A. degree in 1923.

Allison to Battle Cochet In English Feature Today

WIMBLEDON, England, June 29 (A.P.).—The first week of play in the British tennis championships narrowed the field in both the men's and women's singles to the quarter finals, with eight Americans still surviving. The United States has placed five men in the last eight of men's singles and three in the last eight of women's competition.

The outstanding battles on Wimbledon's courts tomorrow will be fought in the men's singles in which the four semifinalists will be decided.

Wilmer Allison, wiry youth from Fort Worth, Tex., battles Henry Cochet, of France, defending champion, in one outstanding match. Although the Texan has played brilliant tennis in this tournament, there are few who give him even an outside chance against the little French master.

The second singles match of the day will be an all-American affair between Johnny Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J. The latter, on the basis of his performances last week, has been installed a favorite over Doeg, whose play has been erratic.

Tilden Expects Battle.

Big Bill Tilden may get strenuous opposition from the English doctor, J. C. Gregory, but the Philadelphian will be an overwhelming favorite just the same.

In the final quarter-finals match, George Lott, of Chicago, will encounter the second French ace, Jean Borotra. There is particular interest in this match, since it may give a line on just what the United States can hope to accomplish in the Davis Cup challenge round, provided the Americans get that far. Borotra beat Lott in the 1929 challenge round, but has shown unmmistakable signs of slowing up this season.

As the situation now appears, the United States is regarded as certain to place two in the semifinals, Tilden and either Doeg or Mangin, and possibly will have three, granting Lott at least an even chance of beating Borotra. The finals, scheduled for Saturday, probably will pit Cochet against Tilden, although it is admitted that both will have to overcome serious challenges in both the quarter and semifinal rounds.

Mrs. Moody Opposes Elizabeth Ryan.

The pairings for the last eight in the women's singles, to be played later in the week, follow: Helen Wills Moody, Berkeley, vs. Elizabeth Ryan, Californian living in England; Mme. Rene Mathieu, France, vs. Joan Ridley, England; Helen Jacobs, Berkeley, Calif., vs. Cecilie Aussem, Germany.

Critics concede another title to Mrs. Moody, but British hopes are centered on Miss Nuthall, who played much improved tennis last week.

RULING OF MOMENTARY CATCH AFTER COLLISION OF PLAYERS INCITES UPROAR AMONG 14,000

Marberry to Oppose Browns in Today's Encounter.

Braxton Not Missed as Starters Go the Route.

WHEN Garland Braxton, Nats' main relief cog, was traded to the White Sox a few weeks ago, there was considerable moaning among the Washington fans. At the time Fred Marberry was not going well and it was the general opinion that the slim southpaw would be missed perhaps more than Art Shires' acquisition would help the team.

Things have not worked out this way, however, and there have been but two games in which the Nats have really missed Braxton since he departed. Worrying over relief pitchers is the least of Manager Walter Johnson's troubles these days. "We don't need any regular relief men," he stated last night. "I believe when I let Braxton go that my regulars, who had shown brilliant work early in the season, were merely in a slump and that they would soon come out of it. And, judging from the fact that the starter finished the whole eight games of our winning streak, it looks as though I had the right dope.

"Of course, I didn't expect the pitchers to go on forever like they have in the last two weeks, as each one is likely to have an off day or so occasionally, but I don't believe that we will experience another stretch like we did on our last Western trip when all stumbled at once.

"I'm not figuring on any one man

No Special Relief Hurler,

as relief pitcher. I believe that Irving Hadley, Al Crowder, Ad Liska, Fred Marberry and Lloyd Brown will win quite regularly, with Sam Jones likely to step in at intervals and give us a victory. If any of these need help, I plan to use one of these six regulars for relief, as, with this number going right, I will always have a choice of at least two who could step in for a few innings," Johnson concluded.

The eight games, preceding yesterday's, which the Nats won in a row were turned in as follows: By Crowder, Marberry and Hadley, two each, and by Brown and Liska, one each, the underhanded rookie failing yesterday.

Fred Marberry will be out after his third straight win this afternoon in the second game of this series with the Browns, while it is expected that Sam Gray will be his pitching opponent.

Sam Rice probably will not be able to resume action until tomorrow's game. He was improved from his slight indisposition yesterday but was quite weak and did not even report to Manager Johnson.

Catcher Muddy Ruel's finger, which he injured when he was unable to get it out of the way of a foul tip in Saturday's game, was still quite stiff yesterday. He reports that he can work whenever Johnson wants him to, however, but the Nat leader plans to give him at least another day's rest. Spencer was hit on the thumb of his throwing hand by a tip. He "shook it off," however.

GALLANT FOX IS UNLIKELY TO START IN SHEVELIN

Stake Friday Will Test Spinach

Flying Heels, Xenofol, Others Among Eligibles.

Advance of Champ Add Interest to $10,000 Test.

By GEORGE DALEY.

NEW YORK, June 29 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Big doings are promised in racing this week. The Aqueduct meeting will come to an end on Friday, the Glorious Fourth, with the running of a brilliant card made up of the Glendale Steeplechase of $8,000, the ancient Carter Handicap of $10,000 and the Shevelin Stakes for 3-year-olds, also of $10,000.

On Saturday the summer meeting at James Butler's track near Yonkers will open with the running of the Empire City Handicap at 1 mile and a quarter. In addition, the sporting meeting of the Arlington Park Jockey Club will open this afternoon near Chicago for what promises to be a gala session with a generous offering of rich stakes.

Gallant Fox is in the Shevelin Stakes, but may be kept in the barn and so leave the way open for one of the lesser tribe of 3-year-olds to win the lion's share of the $10,000 purse. Spinach is eligible for the 1-mile struggle, and so are Starpatic, Maya, Kai Feng, recently purchased by E. R. Bradley for $30,000; Flying Heels, Xenofol, Black Majesty and Swinfield, among others.

It will be a better race without Gallant Fox.

Spinach, Flying Heels May Renew Rivalry.

If, perchance, Spinach and Flying Heels should meet, much interest would be aroused, as they finished heads apart in the Pimlico Futurity last November with the latter getting the verdict.

The Carter Handicap is rich in turf history. It was first run in 1895 and ever has been a rare test for the sprinters with the distance 7 furlongs. In the list of winners are such speedsters as Roseben, Roamer, Old Rosebud, Naturalist, Audacious twice, Sarazen, Happy Argo and Osmand, also twice, and in the past two years. It brought about the famous dead heat in 1926 between Macan and Dedana.

Osmand once again is eligible and may try to make it three in a row, but he is not the Osmand of old. Others named include Jack High, the record 1:35 miler of the Metropolitan Handicap; Polydor, which has come back to his best; Flying Heels and maya, all speedsters.

Gazette Stakes on Wednesday.

The Gazette Stakes, for 3-year-old fillies, will be run on Wednesday. With Snowflake in Chicago, the competition is likely to be keen among Flying Gal, Erin, Dustemal and The Sunfol among others. On Thursday the once famous dinner stakes, called the Astoria, will bring another sight of the best of the 2-year-old fillies.

William Ziegler's Spinach made a deep impression when he came back to the races last Wednesday to gallop a mile in 1:38 4-5. James Butler's Questionnaire won the Broadway Handicap on the same day, and between the two my leaning is to the former. This question has come to be a subject for debate among racing fanciers.

Spinach strained his back in the running of the Wood Memorial at Jamaica, a race won by Gallant Fox, and so missed his chance at the Preakness and Kentucky Derby. W. J. Spiers, his trainer, has great faith in the son of Sir Martin and is keen for a shot at Gallant Fox.

Boots and Saddle's

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office.)

—Latonia Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Latonia racing season of 37 days got away to a good start Saturday. Gallant Knight led all the way to win the Derby easily, and earned $22,175 for the Audley Farm.

FEATURE RACE.

The feature today is the Beech Hill Purse, an allowance race for 3-year-olds and upward. The J. N. Camden filly, ELLICE is selected to win over the favorite, ILLEGITIMATE. Two races back, her second to Whiskery, beating Ironsides, was the best race she has run at Chicago since defeating Ned O. With the light weight imposed and with her early speed, she should beat Illegitimate home. AGIN COURT probably is best of the others. She was third to Current last out.

FIRST RACE—H. P. Whitney's ZOOM, which appears to be in top form and a winner last out, should repeat in the first race. SIMON KENTON appears the only probable contender. CAPTAIN J. S. should get third. ZOOM has been beat out of the money only once this year. SIMON KENTON'S last race was bad.

SECOND RACE—GRADISET appears best of the 2-year-olds in the second race. In her last she was second to Normahal. BELEN should be the contender, on her third to Battle Sweep. THUNDER NYMPH will figure in the race and would be more dangerous on a heavy track.

THIRD RACE—ZETA should repeat in the third race. Three firsts and one second are to her credit in the last four starts, beating such horses as My Hobby and That's It. She meets MY HOBBY again in this race, and he should get the place. She usually runs 6 furlongs around 1:13 ESTIN has a chance and has been rated third. MRS. FOSTER may improve.

FOURTH RACE—H. P. Whitney may score a doub' for his filly GO TO IT in the fifth race looks best, and she was second to Lady Clarence in her last race, which was at Churchill Downs. NETIE PEBBLES and FAIR ROSALIND should fight it out for the place money. The last named won her last race over Miss Rosedale.

SIXTH RACE—SOUR MASH looks the best in the sixth race. He won his last race over Percentage and others. HEAD PIN is regarded the contender, and he won his last start easily. RESPOND is as good as any other in this field of platers.

SEVENTH RACE—RIPFIELD will be favorite in the seventh race, and seems to stand out over the others. JAMES M. probably will be the contender to land the place, and QUIVER, which ran second to Valdosta last out, should get the show money.

Arlington Park, on the heels of the closing of Washington Park Saturday, begins an ambitious meeting of 30 days today, ending on August 2. It will run the Classic, worth $70,000 to the winner, during the meeting. The feature today is the Arlington Inaugural Handicap, the first running of the stake. The entry of SILVERDALE and JOCK should win the 7-furlong dash. SILVERDALE is at his best now, and won his last two starts easily. There is little doubt that BROWN WISDOM and MISSTEP will be the contenders. MISSTEP is entered in the Chicagoan Purse also, where he would have a better chance. BLUE LARKSPUR is to start in the latter race. There is no line on him. He is said to be in good condition after a long lay-off from racing.

LEADERS WIN IN COUNTY SERIES

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY contenders for Capital City League honors held their respective positions yesterday. The Mount Rainier, Hyattsville and Dixie Pig Nines turned in victories over second division rivals.

Hyattsville encountered the sternest kind of opposition at Berwyn. Ten innings of heated battling were required before Hiser's clan managed to gain a 5-to-4 decision. Bowie bowed to Mount Rainier, 12 to 5, and the Brentwood Hawks yielded to their old rivals, the Dixie Pigs, 10 to 4.

Lefty McIntyre hurled for Berwyn and met Tom Mudd, of Hyattsville, at his best. Both pitched effectively, but Jules Radice, former Maryland star, furnished the punch necessary to carry the winners over the top in the final inning.

Quigley, Bowman, Colley Star.

Bob Quigley was the master at Bowie and his mates gave him a good margin in the latter frames. Earl Bowman and Nelson Colley led the Mounts' attack.

Blackie Adair not only pitched the Hawks into submission, but contributed four hard blows to the winning cause. Three of his hits were doubles.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS LOSES DISTRICT SECTION LEAD

St. Joes Take First Place In Race

Trim Aztecs, 19-14; Walter Reed Beats Heights Nine.

Burroughs Hold 3d Place by Downing Woodmen, 14-7.

COLUMBIA HEIGHTS' undefeated record was smashed yesterday in the ninth inning with two hands retired when the Army Medicos rallied for four runs at Walter Reed to hand the Heightsmen a 7 to 6 setback.

The top round of the District section championship ladder of the Capital City League was also taken from the Heights Nine as the defending champions representing St. Joseph's A. C. trimmed the Aztecs, 19 to 14, on the Plaza diamond and stepped in front in the title parade.

Burroughs A. A. also kept pace with the leaders and held third place by defeating the Woodmen of the World, 14 to 7, on Burroughs Field.

Skinker Eagles Out-hit Foxhall A. C.

The Skinker Bros. Eagles scored their second win of the series by outslugging the Foxall A. C. tossers to gain a 17-to-16 decision on the new Skinker Bros. field.

By defeating the Mohawks at Congress Heights, the Anacostia Eagles advanced to fifth place in the race. The Hawks were upset, 11 to 4.

Red Rhodes, of the Columbia Heights Nine, and Augustus Woods, of the Medicos, engaged in a hurling duel. The Heights Nine apparently clinched the verdict by scoring three runs in the ninth, but, with two hands expired, the Soldiers came back with four runs to gain the decision. Withers was the batting hero, getting four safeties in as many times at bat.

Haas' Homer, 3 on Bases, Features Game.

Sammy Haas' home run with the bases loaded was the feature of the St. Joseph's-Aztec contest. His blow was one of the longest ever seen by Plaza fans.

Brown's effective pitching and Clark's home run were chief factors in the Anacostia's Eagles victory. Benny Spiegel hurled the Burroughs Nine to victory, yielding but eight hits. Both teams played listless ball at times. Doc Baker hit a home run for the losers. Heavy hitting featured the Skinker-Foxall contest.

JEFFERSON DISTRICT FIREMEN moved back into the midst of the championship battle in the Virginia section of the Capital City League when they defeated the Woodlawns yesterday on the Virginia Highlands diamond, 7 to 6.

The Ballston A. C. Nine remained in second place, a half game behind the leading Bauserman Motor Co. Nine, by virtue of a forfeit received from the Cherrydale Firemen, who also forfeited their franchise by failing to put a team on the field.

Jones, in Relief Role, Stars.

With Lefty Jones working well in the closing rounds and one big inning, the lucky seventh, the Jefferson Firemen just managed to turn back the scrappy Woodlawns. Gorman pitched well for the losers and, but for one bad session, when the winners counted five runs, would have gained the decision.

Hewitt hurled the first six rounds for the victors, but was yanked after six Woodlawn runs had been scored. Jones finished in great style, yielding but one hit in the last three rounds. Gorman led both teams at bat.

Naval Hospital Bows To Richmonders, 2-1

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., June 29.—Burke & Co., Nine triumphed over Naval Hospital of Washington today at the Stadium in one of the best games staged here in many years. The score being 2 to 1. Tom Snell, southpaw, gained the decision over Ingram, regarded as the ace of hurlers in the National Capital. Snell and Ingram kept their hits well scattered. "Suey" Eason, former William and Mary outfielder, drove in the two Burke runs, while the sterling defensive play of Pat Bellew at second base robbed Naval Hospital of two runs and victory.

"Yak" Lacy walked in the first inning, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on Eason's single to left field. Evans followed with a single, but Ingram tightened up and staved off the clothiers until the eighth frame when Lacy's single, Leisfeld's second sacrifice, and Eason's third hit accounted for the winning run. Doubles by Payne and Bridges gave the Navy boys their lone tally in the ninth inning. With one out in the second inning, three successive singles filled the bases for Naval Hospital, but a double play retired the side.

BY ROUTING one of their chief contenders yesterday while the King's Palace Nine was turning back another, the Sam Wests gained a firmer grasp on the top round of the Capital City League midget championship ladder. The Westmen defeated Georgetown, 13 to 3, while the Senators were being beaten by the Palacians, 7 to 1. The Lionels jumped into second place by virtue of a forfeit decision over the Hurchman's Store Nine, of Alexandria.

With Jimmy Garner pitching at his best, the Westmen had no trouble in turning back the Georgetowns The winners took a commanding lead in the first round and added runs as the game progressed.

Hurchman Team Forfeits.

Pierce and Pohl divided the mound duties for King's Palace, coasting along with a comfortable lead in the closing rounds as their mates piled up plenty of safeties.

The Hurchman Team failed to appear for play and the game was awarded the Lionels.

NATS BEATEN BY BROWNS, 6 TO 3

jumped upon the southpaw shoots of Walter Stewart for three runs in the first frame and then he settled down to business and stopped them dead. These markers were the result of a single by Myer, a walk to Cronin, Harris' double, which scored two, and one-basers by Judge and Bluege. Following this latter blow, Kress gave Spencer life on an error, filling the bases, but Pitcher Ad Liska could not produce the needed bingle.

Liska, Ineffective, Gets Excused in 4th.

Neither could the subway-ball hurler produce any effective pitching. In the second, Gullic's double, Melillo's triple, which Harris played poorly, and O'Rourke's single, netted two runs, while the Browns scored two more in the next frame, thanks largely to an error by Cronin.

Liska walked Blue as a starter and then took Badgro's grounder and pegged to second. With a possible double-play in sight, Cronin dropped the ball. A walk to Goslin filled the bases and Kress then doubled two home. The first of the three double-plays turned in by the Nats ended this round.

When Melillo opened the fourth with a double, Liska gave way to Lloyd Brown, who came in from the bull pen not fully warmed up. Ferrell's single scored Melillo and the only other run of the game came in the seventh. Ferrell opened with a triple to deepest center and Blue singled him home. With two out, Brown filled the bases by walking both Goslin and Kress, but Manush came in fast to take Gullic's looper for the third out.

Judge Leads Batters With 3 Hits.

Judge thought it was another "Judge Day" and cracked out three singles to lead his mates with the flail. Myer, who shared fielding honors of the day with Bluege, both players turning in some fine stops, was second, with a brace of singles. Melillo, Blue and Ferrell each cracked out a pair of safeties for the aliens.

In the Goslin vs. Manush batting race, which has been on since these two outfielders swapped uniforms, the "Wild Goose" went hitless yesterday, but he walked three of the four times he was up. Manush had to be satisfied with one hit in five efforts.

Cardinals Win Two From Giants, 3-2, 5-4

St. Louis, June 29 (A. P.) Behind the excellent pitching of Sylvester Johnson and Bill Hallahan, the St. Louis Cardinals took both ends of a double header from the New York Giants today, 3 to 2, and 5 to 4. The victories gave the Cards three out of the five-game series.

In the first game, Walker, young Giant hurler, held the Cards scoreless and allowed only five hits until the seventh when Bottomley hit a homer to tie the score. Walker then pulled a Charley Horse and had to retire. The Cards nicked Heving for four hits and two runs in the last frame. Johnson held the slugging Giants to five hits.

Hallahan recovered after a bad first inning and let the Giants down with six hits, to win the night cap. He weakened slightly in the ninth but a Giant rally fell short.

Arlington Park Opens 30-Day Meet Today

Chicago, June 29 (A.P.).—Arlington Park, rescued from bankruptcy only three years ago by a group of millionaire Chicago turf idealists, opens a 30-day season tomorrow carrying with it all the romance of Belmont, Saratoga, Ascot and Longchamps and the most lavish money offering in the history of American racing.

Upward of $650,000 will be distributed in purses during the program, which calls for seven races daily, fifteen steeplechases and eight big stakes with a total estimated gross value alone of $263,000. Topping the stake events is the second revival of the American classic July 12, in which Gallant Fox and virtually every outstanding 3-year of America are entered. The steeplechase, over a course little more than a mile around, will be the first offered in Chicago in more than a quarter of a century.

Tomorrow's inaugural stake, the Arlington Handicap, will have an added money value of $7,500 and has 26 better than average entries. Among them are Misstep, Silverdale, High Foot, Golden Prince, Karl Eitel, Windy City and Brown Wisdom. It is for 3-year-olds and upward over seven furlongs. Misstep ranked as a favorite tonight.

ACMES PLAY SENATORS.

The Acme Printing Co. Team will play the Neighborhod House Senators at 5 o'clock tomorrow on No. 1 diamond. All Acme players are to report at 4:30 p. m.

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

gesture. He juggled the ball, but managed to hang on to it.

The twin killing which retired the Browns in their third was a masterpiece. Instead of trying to kill Goslin, on third at the time, at the plate, Bluege came in fast for Gullic's roller, made a good stop and peg to second and Myer shot the sphere to first ahead of the runner.

Spencer's bad-bounding drive hit Melillo in the mouth in the Nats' third, but the St. Louis second sacker bounded on the ball like a hawk and made the out at first just the same.

Brown was called on so suddenly to relieve Liska in the fourth after the first St. Louis batter had doubled that he was not sufficiently warmed up. After he had ended the inning at a cost of an alien run, the Nat southpaw went back to the bull pen to finish getting the kinks out of his flipper.

In three of the first four innings Buddie Myer, Nat lead-off man, was first up. He got on the sacks each time, the result of singles in the first and fourth and via the four-ball route in the second.

A great back-hand stop by Kress, ending the Nats' fourth, robbed Harris of a hit and the Johnsons of a run, for Loepp, who was forced midway on the drive, undoubtedly could have scored had the ball gotten past the St. Louis shortfielder.

With Judge on as a result of a single, opening the native fifth, Bluege attempted to sacrifice. The ball hugged the foul line almost halfway to third with Umpire Campbell and Catcher Ferrell both bending over it. It finally passed into foul territory, whereupon the St. Louis receiver quickly grabbed it.

First Baseman Lu Blue had little to do in the early innings. Spencer's foul pop to him in the fifth was only his second putout of the game.

Bluege made a sensational stop in the seventh when he took Stewart's hot bounder on the half bounce. The speed of the drive swung the Nat third sacker around, but he followed through with a rifle peg to first to make the out. The play held Ferrell on third, following his triple.

Goslin coaxed his third pass in succession in the seventh, Blue having drawn the only other which had been issued by Nat hurlers at that stage of the game.

Myer saved Catcher Spencer a costly error in the alien seventh, when Blue, on second, and Goslin, on first, started to advance on a low peg by Brown. Seeing that Spencer had stopped the ball, Blue hustled back to second, the Nat receiver's throw being low and on the shortstop side of second. Myer grabbed it with his gloved hand on a pick-up.

Bluege made another nice stop and peg, ending St. Louis' eighth, when Ferrell's hard-hit bounder hit him on his chest on a wierd hop.

Bluege almost tore off Kress' shins with a liner opening the home eighth, but the shortstopper recovered the ball in time to make the out on a rifle peg.

Girth a Unit of Measurement.

Ancient units of measurement were far from accurate. The Roman weights were true only to 1 part in 50. The Egyptians were unable to test the accuracy of their units of length closer than 1 part in 350. Going back further we find they were very rough, indeed. In primitive times a yard was probably at first the length around the waist, which naturally was apt to vary considerably.

LYONS WINS 11TH GAME OF YEAR

Chisox Win by 2 to 1 After Losing to Red Sox, 10-6.

BOSTON, June 29 (A.P.).—After the Red Sox won the first game of a double-header from Chicago, 10 to 6, here today, the White Sox turned around and took the final, 2 to 1, behind the clever pitching of Ted Lyons, who thus registered his eleventh win of the season.

Boston's victory in the opener was their eight straight over the White Sox and Faber, the losing pitcher, thus lost his tenth game this season.

Kamm and Tate drove in Chicago's two runs in the second game.

Bobby Jones Denies He Is in Ill Health

Aboard S. S. Europa, En Route to United States, June 29 (A.P.).—Bobby Jones, recently crowned British open and amateur golf champion, is in perfect health but somewhat nervous and apprehensive over reports that a big welcome is awaiting him when he lands in New York. Reports that the task of winning both major British titles had made the Atlantan ill were discounted aboard ship, where it was said Bobby's only troubles concerned the welcome that will be his when the Europa docks at New York.

In Jones' party are Mrs. Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Hurt, Mrs. James D. Cross, Thomas B. Paine, Cyril Tolley, of England; Don Moe, Johnny Dawson, Thomas W. Poter, George Ferry, Albert Free and O. B. Keeler.

Tolley, who lost his British amateur championship to Jones, plans to compete in both the American amateur and American open championships.

Reports that Jones had been made ill by the strain of his triumphant golfing invasion of Great Britain had their source in a statement made at Baltimore by Leo Diegel, American professional champion.

Washington Canoe Club Regatta on July 12

The Washington Canoe Club's annual canoe regatta will be held this year on Saturday, July 12, it was made known yesterday. Entry blanks have been distributed and officials are expecting this year's regatta to be every bit as successful as those held in the past.

Although no entries have been received as yet, it is likely that the Yonkers Canoe Club, of Yonkers, N. Y., which came within a nose of beating the Washington Canoe Club last year, will again compete. The Yonkers Club lost to the local group by one point, in gaining second-place honors.

A half-mile straightaway extending from the Three Sisters Islands to the old Aqueduct Bridge, will constitute the course.

Meanwhile paddlers of the Washington Canoe Club are prepping for the annual Fourth of July regatta of the Philadelphia Canoe Club, which will be held in Philadelphia next Friday. Already three men have been selected to go, with the fourth man still to be picked. The Knight brothers, Harry and Carl, and Herman Vollmer will race for the Capital entry, and at present it appears that Joe Mawson has the inside track for the fourth berth.

Mr. Prochnik said that Austria, lying between the trade centers of Europe, is especially anxious to preserve peace and maintain neutrality. Owing to its strategic position from a standpoint of trade, he said, any disturbance in Austria will be strongly felt by its neighbors.

New Tariff Blamed For Fall in Wheat

Senator Walsh Compares Price in 1913 and at Present Time.

Senator Walsh (Democrat), Montana, yesterday summarized the benefits the American farmer has reaped from Republican protective tariffs by pointing out that wheat sold at 87 cents per bushel under the Underwood-Simmons tariff in 1913 and is now selling in the West at from 64 to 67 cents under the recently enacted Grundy bill.

Disregarding the higher purchasing power of the dollar in 1913, Senator Walsh made a comparison based on actual wheat prices alone and recalled that every time the Republicans have raised the tariff on wheat it has been selling "at an average higher price in Canada than in the United States."

"No wonder agriculture languishes while the selected industrial beneficiaries of the worst tariff ever written laugh," he commented.

PINK TICKETS RAIN IN THIRD PRECINCT

Nearly 2,000 Automobiles Tagged in Campaign on Parking.

CRUSADE JUST STARTED

Little familiar pink tickets—between 1,000 and 2,000 of them—had fairly deluged the densely populated Third Precinct when the cool, gray dawn broke yesterday, as many motorists painfully discovered the rain of police summons, stuck jauntily beneath the windshield wipers of their machines.

It all happened when Capt. William G. Stott took the District Commissioners at their word vigorously to enforce traffic rules proscribing to enforce traffic rules proscribing Saturday he issued an enormous quantity of the summons to his men, and told them to get busy. Evidently they discovered that the average motorist entirely disregarded the law on that point.

One policeman dispensed 91 tags, all he had in his possession. Another batch went out again last night. In the meanwhile, motorists filed through the portals of the precinct station yesterday in a seemingly endless procession, slapping down the required $2 collateral.

Capt. Stott declared the crusade had just started, and again warned that he intended to comb the precinct for violators. The precinct roughly is bounded on the east by the White House and Fifteenth street, on the north by S street, on the west by Rock Creek Parkway, and on the south by the river.

Red Cross Offers Advice To July Fourth Celebrants

With the picnics and fire-crackers of the Fourth of July in the near distance, the Red Cross yesterday offered suggestions to those undergoing trial by merrymaking. All picnicking parties were advised to carry a small first-aid package, with ammonia and bandages and baking soda. But the Red Cross loses the small boy vote by including castor oil among the ingredients of the package.

Visitors to beaches were told that the best thing to be done for sunburn is to stay out of the sun, but the damage, once done, can be alleviated by cocoa butter. The butter, spread on before going into the sun, will prevent burn, it was said. The rule against swimming for an hour after a meal applies even to repasts of hot dogs and sodawater, it was warned. Persons with sinus trouble were advised not to dive, nor get their heads under water.

The most spectacular advice was the last, "If you can't swim for two, do not go out and die with a drowning person—stay on the bank and call for help."

Rules for the treatment of powder burns and for canoeists were also a part of the statement.

Christian Objective Profits, Pastor Says

Rev. Chesteen Smith Delivers Sermon at Masonic Rites.

THE REV. CHESTEEN SMITH.

Life's best investments are made with a Christian objective in view, the Rev. Chesteen Smith, pastor of the Hamline Methodist Episcopal Church, told an audience yesterday at the weekly Masonic religious services at Temple Heights.

"Every man owes it to himself and God to so invest this life that it may yield the best possible returns," he declared. "The man to whom trust funds have been committed knows that he is expected to seek the most profitable investments.

"John Ruskin once said, 'There is no wealth but life.' Material wealth counts inasmuch as it can be translated into character values and thus make its contribution to higher living. Patrick Henry made a wise estimate of material values when, in writing his will, he declared that the most valuable legacy he could leave to his children would be his Christian faith.

"In the study of life investment the law of compensation must be taken into account. We must not forget that 'whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.'

"Investing thought in wholesome knowledge will bring returns in mental efficiency. He who invests his talent in works of art will receive in return a cultivated taste for beauty and for truth. Energies invested in the work of human betterment will bring as a reward expressions of appreciation and memories of highly profitable service. By God's unchanging law the nature of the investment fixes the nature of the return.

"The higher types of manhood and womanhood are investing life with an altruistic purpose. They are seeking and finding that larger compensation which comes through a sympathetic interest in other lives. The altruistic spirit is becoming more and more dominant in the social philosophy of our day. A higher social consciousness is passing the same condemnation upon selfishness that the Great Teacher passed upon it. We are coming to see that the man who refuses to invest his life in the interest of others is lacking in vision and largeness of soul.

"Cecil Rhodes in going into Africa made much for himself and gained much for his nation. On the other hand David Livingstone going into Africa, gave well-nigh all of himself and wrought marvelously for the redemption of the people. When Livingstone died it was the verdict of the world that he had made a most profitable investment of his life.

"That type of manhood must come to thrones of power before we can cure the conditions of ignorance, injustice and crime which prevail in our day. If we aspire to be people who fit into the larger molds of God then we must invest our lives with an altruistic spirit.

"Those who seek the most satisfying returns in character can do no better than to fix as their objective the pattern of life which Christ gave to the world. The highest order of human service is that which is rendered for His sake and in His name. Energies devoted to the promotion of Christ's teachings and spirit will do more to lift humanity to higher planes of thinking and living than any other investment of energies. In the final review of life, the investments which have been made with a true Christian objective will bring to us a sublime assurance of comfort and hope."

CAPITAL MAN SAILS TO ABYSSINIAN POST

Dr. John West Is Named as Personal Physician to Emperor.

PLANS HEALTH PROGRAM

Dr. John B. West, son of Dr. Charles I. West, professor of topographical and chemical anatomy in the Howard University Medical College, and Mrs. Rebecca Baldwin West, together with his wife, Mrs. Muriel Stewart West, left here yesterday for New York, to sail today on the Paris, en route to Adis Ababa, capital of Abyssinia, where Dr. West will become personal physician to the Ras Tafari, Emperor of Ethiopia. The trip, by way of Cherbourg, Paris, Marseilles and Djibouti, French Somaliland, will occupy a month.

The appointment came to Dr. West about two weeks ago, while in Kansas City, Mo., visiting the parents of his wife. Delay was occasioned in securing passage, originally booked for the Mauretania, because a local bank hesitated to turn over to the young colored doctor, who had just completed his internship at Freedmens Hospital, a large sum of money cabled by the Abyssinian ruler for the doctor's passage and such equipment as he desired to bring with him. It was necessary for him to go to New York to thoroughly establish his identification.

Malachu E. Bayen, nephew to the Ras Tafari, a freshman in the Howard University Medical College, was responsible for the appointment. He became a chum of Dr. West at the college, where Charles I. West, jr., a brother, is his classmate. On his return to Abyssinia, following the revolution there in the spring, he interested the emperor in a modern health program, with Dr. West in mind, as well as a staff of 50 colored physicians for the Ethiopian empire to be recruited by him.

The country, with 20,000,000 inhabitants, has no colored doctors, medical work being in charge of French, British and Italians. With the completion of a new dam this spring, it is ready for modern sanitation and a health program. Dr. West will recruit sanitary engineers as well as physicians, following a survey of the country. He will aim to establish a medical college, nurse training and hospital facilities throughout the country, after returning to Vienna, Austria, and to the United States, for training as an eye specialist. The Ras Tafari, who has eye trouble, especially desired completion of this training program.

Dr. West is a graduate of the elementary schools here, and of the Williston Academy Easthampton, Mass. He obtained his premedical and medical training at Howard University, where he was the first president of the Mu Delta Phi fraternity, of high scholarship basis. He is 25 years old. His father, who resides at 924 M street northwest, has been connected with the anatomical department of Howard University since 1895, and has been in charge of this department for the past five years.

Two Parachutes Will Be Required

Latest Rule to Safeguard Jumpers to Go in Effect on August 1.

(Associated Press.)

Parachute jumpers will be required to wear an auxiliary parachute under an amendment to the air commerce regulations which will be effective August 1, 1930.

Clarence M. Young, Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Aeronautics, in announcing the revised regulations yesterday, said that "the auxiliary parachute must be so arranged that it can be operated in the event the first parachute either fails to function or becomes fouled on any part of the plane or body of the jumper.

"While it is common practice for parachute jumpers to carry an auxiliary parachute," he added, "there have been times in the past when this has been neglected." The regulations will apply to testing, exhibition, training or demonstration jumps.

Navy Organizes Radio for Trouble

Amateur Stations of 2,300 Reserves to Be Used in Disasters.

(Associated Press.)

A Nation-wide radio system to provide communication in time of disaster through 2,300 members of the Naval Reserve has been established. These 2,300 Naval Reservists, the Navy said yesterday, have been instructed as to the manner in which they should handle disaster reports from amateur radio stations they operate. The plan was adopted after a conference between the Red Cross and the Navy, and calls for messages from the reservists to the Red Cross. The first message is to report the kind and location of the disaster, and the second the number of dead, injured, homeless, houses destroyed and families affected.

With this information available immediately instead of waiting for land line communication to be reestablished, it is believed that Red Cross relief expeditions can be more speedily organized and better equipped.

Parachute Jump May Set Record

Altimeter of Plane Used by Bert White Quits at 23,000 Feet.

Los Angeles, June 29 (A.P.).—Bert White, professional parachute jumper, today made his second assault upon Capt. A. W. Stevens' record leap at 24,402 feet altitude at McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio, in 1922.

Roscoe Turner, transcontinental flier, who piloted the plane, said his altimeter "went hay wire" at 23,000 feet and his carburetor began to freeze at a slightly higher altitude. He said White jumped at between 23,000 and 25,000 feet and he believed a new record likely.

Unlike his first jump, White was not lost after he left the plane. Turner followed him down several thousand feet to make sure he was safe. White said he reached the ground in 23 minutes.

As Mr Kersley, accompanied by the two children, was walking under the grandstand to reach his seat, he fell to the ground. The children, Billy Dewald, 10 years old, and Beverly, 12 years old, were cared for by park attendants until their parents came for them. It was early in the game, according to spectators, when the man was stricken.

Burke, of Twenty-ninth street near Tilden street northwest. He had been arrested at his home Saturday for investigation.

In the grand larceny cases, Burke was charged with the theft of $80 in cash from M. Vasques at his rooms in the hotel, and with the theft of a $75 set of golf clubs from an automobile owned by E. Lost Teeth Again United With Owner in Restaurant

A joyous reunion between an owner and his teeth was enacted last night in a restaurant on E street near Fourteenth street northwest, the pair having been separated most of the day.

The teeth went awry shortly after the gentleman owner ate his breakfast in the lunchroom. He took them out after they had done their duty and seeking to ease their labors on a hot day, wrapped them in a cool and comforting paper napkin.

The napkin with the teeth was inadvertently left on the "armchair" and there they were found by a somewhat nonplussed bus boy. After the manner of all good bus boys, this one sought the advice of the manager of the place and the two took counsel.

The teeth were placed in safekeeping in the cashier's cage, and there they were kept until the owner inquired anxiously for them late last night. And, straightaway, a liquid diet was abandoned for a steak dinner.
